

A BIT OF MY ROMANTIC EXPERIENCES

Ica seeing places, and have been absorbed by a different kind of atmosphere. I have felt as though some kind of swoon had come upon me, and as if I were only dreaming. My last and not the least, but intimate and pleasant connection has been while I have been in the University of Nebraska for two years. My adaptation to the American life is a most romantic experience. I remember how surprised I was to see the people walk so fast and always in a rush, but within a very short time I found myself doing the same. I also remember my first experience with a cafeteria, how embarrassed I was to take a tray along, but now cafeteria is part of my life. Again, how shocked I was to see college girls run on the street; and now I find myself doing the same, occasionally. Another thing that amuses me very much, is to be thought by some a gipsy, and by others an American Indian, a Spaniard, and so forth.

"In the midst of these and other varied experiences, however, the one that I count vital, which enriches my soul is the friendliness of the students. My friendship with the students of Nebraska will always delight my soul, and will remain very sacred to my heart. The fervor of its pleasant memories will rise like the flame of incense and delight my whole being from time to time. Another source of joy that my soul will feed upon, is the contact with my professors, which has ennobled my whole self to a great extent; and it is with my deepest regards that I shall enshrine the ideas I received from their instructions in the temple of my heart. They will remain in the history of my life as sacred monuments.

"Life is indeed a mystery. It is the mystery which gives a touch of novelty to it, and I have found from experience that life's secret lies in our thinking. The nobility of our soul and of our future life is the heritage of our thinking of today. The different and distant parts of the world are being closely connected with each other by the wonderful scientific inventions—the working of human mind. I feel that we no longer belong to a particular place in the world alone, but that we are citizens of the world, not only passive citizens, but actors on the stage of the world's theatre.

"When I was yet young, in my childhood imagination and feeling, there came to my heart a peculiar idea, which was, as it were, a voice like the little rivulets that come from a mountain, that I am world's and the world is mine. That childhood idea is matured now to a definite faith and vision, and my stay in America has strengthened my vision to a large degree.

"As the time draws near for me to leave the country, a strange feeling comes within me—and I feel as if I am just beginning to wake up from the swoon-like sleep, and will be fully awakened when my foot touches the soil of the 'Burning Heart of Asia' (India)! Herewith I wish to express my appreciation to my friends and all who helped me, and made my stay a happy and a pleasant one in every respect. I may not have time to bid goodbye to all of you in the rush of the following days; and as I expect to leave the country the first week in June, I herewith bid farewell to you all.

"At last I would like to answer one question which I have been asked again and again: 'How do you like our country?' Well, I think sometimes the words do not really express the full meaning of our hearts; but in my oriental way I will say that India is my Mother and America my sweetheart!"

INTERSCOLASTIC ACADEMIC CONTESTS

The test will be of such a character that only good general school work will avail in preparation for them, according to the bulletin sent out from the University Extension Department, under the auspices of which the contest is to be managed. The awarded will be for individual merit, and the smallest high school in the state will compete with the largest on a plane of equality.

Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded for place in each event. The individual and school winning the highest number of points will be awarded appropriate trophies.

The rules of the contest are:

 4. Each student entering the contest must have completed the equivalent of three full subjects of secondary school grade during the preceding semester.
