YOU NEED NEBRASKA

Nebraska has started on the fifty-fifth year of her existence. Thousands of students have left her annually, men who are now leading the world's affairs. Thousands more will leave and the institution will go on, ever turning out men for the greater benefit of civilization.

Years spent in college are few. They take up a minor portion of a person's life. They are the turning point in the career of men. Then, if ever, the future of a person will be indicated. Unless a radical change overtakes him, the man is to the world as he is to his college.

You are men in the making today. Make yourself the man that you would be. The various individuals that go to make up the great mass, called humanity, determine the quality of this mass. You are one of the individuals. It is partly your contributions in the person of yourself that will measure the status of society. Your position is important. Make the most of it.

DON'T BE A "FENCE RIDER"

If you have convictions and feel sure that your mind is as well developed as your fellowman's, then pronounce your convictions. A "fence rider" gets kicks from both sides. Get down on the solid ground. Stand up and face the issues. A man with a normal mind, acting as a plaything for another man would be more valuable to society if he were a lunatic.

If you are a man, act the part of a man. Be an individual acting for the benefit of the whole. Your own interests should be compatible with the interests of the greater number whose interests are unselfish.

Merely Opinion

Nebraska's football team will soon invade the east to meet Illinois, the pride of the "Big Ten." This is a game that will attract national attention. Think of the honor that will be reflected back on the students at the University of Nebraska. You are one of them.

Sororities announced their pledges last night. Girls who have affiliated themselves with an organization have started on a career in the University of Nebraska. Every upperclassman hopes that the new members of all sororities will be as faithful to this institution as they are to their organization.

Be a Nebraskan. Think Nebraska, see Nebraska, learn Nebraska. You are a part of this great university. Play your part.

Classes start tomorrow in earnest. Start to study immediately. Keep up with your assignments. Hit the stride and there will be no trouble for you.

Coaches report that there are not enough men turning out for student managers. The winner of this position is allowed to wear the coveted "N." Football, track, basketball and baseball men spend many days working for this distinct honor. This is a chance for students without athletic ability to win a letter.

There are still a number of vacancies on the staff. Get your application in Monday. A number of persons able to qualify will be given positions as editorial writers. See the editor immediately.

There are openings for a number of feature writers. This is a distinct class of news story that will add the general value of the paper. All positions are open to competition. The person displaying the greatest ability will be given the better assignments.

YALE PROFESSOR IS EMPLOYED BY STATE

Dr. Carl Dunbar Assists in the Collection of Geologic Fossils.

Dr. Carl Dunbar, professor of geology at Yale university was employed this summer by the State Geological Survey to assist in the collection of geographic and geologic fossils. About three hundred species were secured and are now being arranged in Nebraska hall. Dr. Dunbar left for Yale on Wednesday to resume his duties. He will come back to Nebraska next summer.

Soil Surveys Made in Five Counties

During the summer months soil surveys were made of Adams, Webster, Kearney, Platte, and Merrick counties were completed by the conservation and Survey Division. A sixth county, Buffalo, will be finished before winter. This work was done in cooperation with the United States Division of Soils. Many photographs were taken during the summer for the Conservation and Survey Division. Photographic records of the Nebraska state capitol and the memorial stadium were also made and will continue to be made until these two projects are finished.

Landis and Condra Inspect Surveys

Regent Landis and Dr. Condra made a lengthy summer trip over the state inspecting soil surveys and lecturing at various chambers of commerce. Regent Landis also visited various agricultural experiment stations on the trip.

The Conservation and Survey Division has fitted up an office for Professor Evinger who is directing town-planning work of the division and Dr. Condra is just installing a research laboratory to be used in connection with some of the work.

Mr. W. A. Wolfanger, who has been engaged on soil survey work, has left for Columbia University to teach some classes in economic geography and also to work for his doctor's degree. Mr. Pain has left soil survey work to teach in the Fremont high school. Mr. Glenn Ruby, '19, who will be remembered on account of his prominence as a wrestler, is now engaged in geologic consultation work in Denver. He recently visited the university and has taken a number of leases on the Table Rock anticline and will start drilling for oil in the near future.

Dr. Alexander Writes Article on Aztec Gods

(University News Service)
A recent issue of "Art and Archeology" contains five illustrated poems by Dr. H. B. Alexander, chairman of the department of philosophy, dealing with Aztec deities and expressing in poetic form the mystic beauty of their worship. Exceptionally apt are the illustrative designs by Anders J. Haugseth, instructor in the University School of Fine Arts, which accompany the series. They are not copies, but like the verse are studies aiming to reproduce the central spirit of the deities represented. The five Aztec gods portrayed are represented in characteristic form and action, fearful and awful, but artistically and accurately done.

Prof. R. D. Scott of the department of English spent the summer in research work in the library of the University of Chicago, investigating the Irish content of literature.

Several new courses are offered this semester in the College of Business Administration. Prof. O. R. Martin has charge of the work in retail store management, and in addition will have several sections of the new sophomore course in Business Administration. Prof. E. S. Fullbrook is conducting the revised course in marketing, which has been made a junior subject; and Prof. D. F. Cole, who takes over the duties formerly performed by Professor Ivey in advertising.

Dean Warren A. Seavey of the College of Law returned last week after spending a month and a half in New England and the month of August as professor of law in the Cornell University summer school.
