MEMORIAL STADIUM.

The dedication of Nebraska's stadium today is more than a mere exercise, more than an arbitrary date, and more than the power of custom.

The program is as appropriate as ordinary usage would have it. The football game is a matter of fact. K. U. has played Nebraska many times and K. U. is an honorable foe. It is also quite appropriate to invite friends. As yet, there is nothing unusual.

The speakers are men who have been honored and who have honored us. The impressiveness of the service is quite in keeping with the incident.

But, back of all the ceremony, back of all the efforts put forth in making the day memorable, there is that great sympathetic, and omnipresent power called sentiment. There is an overwhelming value to that word "memorial."

That great mass of steel and concrete, shaped into a desirable form, has a physical use, a purpose that is very small in comparison to the force to which it was dedicated. The elements used in the construction of that artificial structure, where men were paid to insure its completion, where every effort was reimbursed by a commercial medium, are but representations of a sentiment—representations by merit of the force that they carry in their numbers.

The men who died for this nation and the men who served this nation, have been given the highest honor that this institution is capable of giving. To dedicate this great memorial, more than 10,000 persons have donated money. Great football teams played for years to bring glory to this institution and eventually to be considered worthy of something better than temporary stands.

All activity halts in the University today. All Lincoln and all the state has focused its eyes upon that great indestructible memorial, that does not carry the stigma of a public utility.

It is a great Nebraska upon the day of the dedication of the memorial stadium, but it is a "Greater Nebraska" that we look forward to. And it is the alumni and students who will make that "Greater Nebraska" a reality.

"U" HALL AND THE STADIUM.

The dedication of the stadium is another link in the long chain of events which constitutes the history of the University. The formal presentation of the structure introduces it at once to the world and into the annals of history.

The history of the school, as it exists in the buildings on the campus, begins in University hall and, to date, ends in the stadium. From "U" hall to the stadium covers a period of over fifty years, and this whole space of time is filled with the story of the steady growth of educational advantages in the state of which both are a part.

The two structures represent very different phases of education. "U" hall, with its classrooms and its libraries, savors of the strictly intellectual aspect. The stadium, with its equipment for athletics, represents the newer ideal of physical education.

"U" hall is wrapped in tradition. Undoubtedly, similar sentiment will cling around the stadium and become interwoven with the story of its existence. It is certain that, just as "U" hall has witnessed both success and failure, the stadium will see its share of victory and defeat.

HOMECOMING.

Today, the annual day set aside for alumni to revisit Nebraska and see her again in her glory, marks the culmination of an achievement that has long been the dream of every Nebraskan, a stadium.

Thousands of former students are in Lincoln today to critically note the progress with which the present students have been charged. The alumni will observe every change and they have returned expecting to see a greater Nebraska.

With the new stadium, with a student body that is stronger and better organized than ever before, there is confidence at Nebraska that the alumni will not be disappointed.

To alumni of this great institution, we extend a hearty "Welcome Back."

First Edition of "N" Letter Mailed

The first edition of the "N" letter was published and sent to all alumni members of the Nebraska "N" club the past week.

The news letter is a monthly publication by the active members of the athletic organization and is for the purpose of giving information concerning the present letter men. In past seasons the news letter has been the source of much interest in Cornhusker athletic competition on the part of University alumni.

The first letter of the 1923-24 series contained information of the football and cross country teams as well as several facts concerning old "N" men throughout the country. The club plans to make the letter more interesting than in former years and will publish news of all school activities throughout the year. The second letter will be published about November 10.

Arthur Middleston, famous baritone of the Metropolitan Opera company, New York, will sing on the closing evening of the convention. The complete program will be in the hands of state teachers this week.

RAG CARPET Conducted by Carolyn Airy

SAYINGS OF THE GREAT.

Trotzky: I'm a well red man.
Lord Cecil: Half a league, half a league, half a league onward.
Adam: It's a great life if you don't weaken.
Cleopatra: You're an easy Mark, Anthony.
Helen of Troy: So this is Paris.
Solomon: I love the ladies.
Jonah: You can't keep a good man down.
Methuselah: The first hundred years are the hardest.
Noah: It floats.
Atlas: I'll ask the world, how do you get that way?
Nero: Keep the home fires burning.
Columbus: I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way.
Queen Eliz. to Sir Walter: Keep your shirt on.
Washington: If winter comes, I'll light Valley Forge.

We are wondering what frat is going to occupy the brick structure being erected east of the Temple.

We went to the game Saturday and we could swear that ourselves and the guy behind us were the only ones that yelled.

If the awkward squad gets half as much pleasure out of drilling as we do watching them—military training is the only thing.

Yes, Susie, the letters C. E. over the building at the north of the campus don't stand for Christian End of the Campus Eggs.

NOW WE KNOW.

Why do you like mince pie? Because it not only tickles the principle organ of appetite but likewise appeals to the seat of gustation and to the organ of discourse.

New York Writer Says Irish Squad Ranks With Best

Commenting on the Army-Notre Dame game of last Saturday, Henry E. Mooberry, New York sports writer, says that the Catholics have a wonderful team, in his opinion, as strong as any team that ever represented the school. He predicts a great game when the Irish meet the Cornhuskers on November 11. The game is attracting much attention in the east as one of the largest contests of the season.

National football interest Saturday will center on Notre-Dame-Princeton fray and the Iowa-Illinois game at Iowa City. Both games will be watched by Nebraskans with some interest as both Illinois and Notre Dame appear on the Husker 1923 schedule.

Lower Classes Make Plans for Olympics

The freshman and sophomore classes are now making plans for the annual Olympics which are to be held November 24, the day of the Syracuse game.

The affair will be much the same this year as it has been in the past. The Innocents are in charge and are arranging for events in wrestling, boxing, and general mob-fighting. The blood of both classes is up, and it looks as if the contest this year will be a real battle.
