THIRD PLACE

Nebraska is in third place in the Missouri Valley basketball race, and by administering a decisive beating to Washington, pushed her down to fourth—all of which further confirms our opinion voiced early in the season that Nebraska has one of the best teams in the valley. This team has lost several games, but they were mostly by close scores, and while we are not offering an alibi, hard road trips with games close together had as much to do with our downfall as any other element.

The Nebraska quintet could offer any team in the country all they would care to meet in one evening.

The spirit displayed by the crowd at the game Friday night was a decided improvement over that of other games, and this has no doubt been an important factor in the improvement of the morale of the players.

So, we think that our team deserves better than third place, we bide our time. We are consoled by the thought that only one regular will be missing from the lineup next year. The 1925 Husker basketball team should be the best in the country.

THE WORKING STUDENT

Sympathy is often expressed for the boy who is working his way through school. Perhaps he has not been recognized socially in the past but today he recognized in campus and social activities as an equal. A survey made by Howard Brubaker, published in one of the last issues of the Saturday Evening Post, entitled "The Self Supporting Student," shows that out of 175 schools investigated, 225,000 students are enrolled, 100,000 of which are working to pay their expenses.

At the University of Chicago, 50 per cent work their way, University of California 60 per cent, New York University 60 per cent, Tufts College 75 per cent, and at our own University, according to the records of the Employment secretary, about 50 per cent.

Statistics gathered for this article show that 10 per cent of the girls enrolled in American colleges are working their way through school, while 44 per cent of the men are working their way.

In this article, Mr. Brubaker points out that the working student of today is the careful, thoughtful business man of tomorrow, because many of the principles learned working will tend to make him a business success.

Much credit is due the working student. He needs encouragement many times because financial conditions may make him downhearted. The Y. M. C. A. has been an active factor in assisting students through the employment bureau. Oftentimes it is not the finding of a job or the pointing out of a loan fund, but the friendly, brotherly interest of the secretary as students come to him for advice and help. Those of us who have our expenses paid should show a friendly interest in the working student, both through sharing of his problems with him and by socially recognizing him as an equal. This builds genuine and lasting friendships.

ACKNOWLEDGE CHARTER DAY.

Alumni in eighteen states have expressed their enjoyment of the Charter day radio program broadcast by the University and Hastings stations. It must have been an enjoyable event for an alumnus who has been out of school for some time to go to the radio set and tune in, and hear a program which included an address by the Chancellor of his alma mater and other selections by University talent.

It must have brought recollections

THE MORNING AFTER--

BELIEVE IT OR NOT--

The story is current concerning The Daily Nebraskan sport writer who, in a time of emergency, was sent to cover an intercollegiate debate. His story follows:

"Nebraska's fighting logic-tossers locked horns Saturday night with a speedy aggregation of word-jugglers from Blank college, emerging from the bout with the long end of a two-to-three judges' decision. The quibble was over the question of whether emigration or immigration should be limited, the Nebraska 'think-shoppers' upholding the minus side of the squabble. At no time was the home teams' goal seriously threatened, although the Blankers on several occasions showed flashes of superiority in the use of descriptive adjectives. In the closing period the Husker trio displayed a high-powered ability to duck and block. The next dispute will be threshed out on a foreign floor as the local logicians journey to a neighboring state over the week-end."

We may be a little late, but following the lead of the University Night committee and Sigma Delta Chi, we wish to announce that we are in no way responsible for anything that occurred at the auditorium Saturday night.

Miss Nomer says that she certainly enjoyed Senator Johnson's speech and she hopes that he decides to run for some office so she can vote for him.

WEEKLY ETIQUETTE LESSON.

Andy Gump, the well-known statesman and financier, was awarded the prize this week. His solution states that: "Every person should learn to manicure his nails with his left hand for there is always a possibility of getting the right hand cut off." This week we will offer as a first prize a beautiful chewing-gum statue of a plumber at work. We want to know what foods should be conveyed to the mouth with a knife.

We recently read a very short history of the life of George Washington and it occurred to us as rather surprising that the birthdays of so many great men come on holidays.

The New York police have been unable to find any trace of the slayers of Louise Lawson but they have shown great literary talent in naming the unknown assailants "the towel strangers." It's remarkable how versatile the modern detective is.

POLITICAL PALAVER OF A PESSIMIST.

All the world's a stage and every politician a stage robber.

Some one was heard to ask, "What are politics coming to?" We won't try to answer that but we do think we know where they have gone to.

A song hit popular with politicians these days—"Don't Bite the Hand That's Fleecing You."

It is rumored that the Republicans are now omitting the second clause in the fifth verse, when they read the twenty-third Psalm.

The Democrats are probably doing the same thing.

Sire, I beg to report that oil is not well near the Potomac.
