DADS' DAY

Inviting "Dad" to the University for Dads' day is being built into one of the strongest of Nebraska customs, and largely because of the sentiment that is attached to the observance of such an occasion.

The luncheon in the Armory, Saturday noon, brings "dad" into a University building, to the center of the campus.

In the afternoon he sees what is often his first game of football, almost certainly one of his few games.

In the evening, whether he attends a dinner at a fraternity house or is entertained simply by his son, he is reassured that college is not going to the boy's head.

The whole day's festivities help "dad" to see newspaper reports of "wild" college life are gross exaggerations, that the years spent here will not affect his son for the worse, and that the institution is worthy of more liberal financial support.

STUDENTS IN POLITICS

Students in foreign universities, we understand, take a great interest in politics. Often in news dispatches it is stated that a political demonstration was staged by the students.

When these students leave college this interest should naturally continue for ones likes and dislikes are largely formed during the college period.

American students, on the contrary, seem to take little interest in government. It is doubtful whether half the students at the University of Nebraska could tell who are Nebraska's senators, who are its congressmen, who is secretary of state, or what the code law really means.

It is because of this lack of interest in politics that American government today is as slipshod as it is. When one fails to inform himself of the qualifications of the candidates or about the real issues between parties, it is not surprising that there is stupid voting.

American law-makers have often been living examples of the gullibility of the voters. Often they are jokes—nothing more than pompous, unintelligent figureheads with bulky voices and the ability to recite their drivel fluently.

The study of political science seems to have little effect toward bringing intelligent voting. The students recite their lessons with fair accuracy in class; their interest goes no farther than to "get by." Seldom do they gain any real interest in government.

Practical politics has been criticized as corrupt—probably it is—but if there is any way to bring it to a higher level it is by intelligent voting.

When students take an interest in politics and inform themselves of the real issues and of the candidates, American politics will reach a higher level and begin to deal with government and not graft.

CARS AT COLLEGE

Mr. Hugh Fullerton, the city of New York, and the University of Indiana have conspired within the last few weeks to bring to our minds that automobiles are becoming a nuisance.

Mr. Fullerton wrote a sensational article about cars, co-eds, and colleges. New York has prohibited parking in certain streets, and a resolution has been prepared and presented to the faculty of the University of Indiana which, if passed, will prohibit the use in the city of Bloomington of an automobile by any student.

Last year we had our own little debate on the question of automobiles, and settled it. The University tactfully did not attempt to regulate student ownership of cars. It merely did as the great city of New York did.

But Indiana and Mr. Fullerton take the other side. Hugh says that he believes it is detrimental to the youth to own cars while at school. So, apparently, do some persons in Bloomington.

We feel certain that the good sense of the faculty will prevail and that students in Indiana will not have to keep their cars in garages just outside of the city limits, but the tendency is what concerns us. Frightened by the harum-scarum of a few owners of machines; those who propose the resolution would prohibit all students from using cars. In an effort to protect a few worthless students who would go to the dogs with or without automobiles even those of the student body who could earn Phi Beta Kappa keys would be deprived of the pleasure of driving.

Allegations that students use cars to the defeat of education seem to us to be begging the question. The University is stepping out of its way to find trouble. If it can be proved that a few students who own cars are flunking, let them be got rid of, but let the others keep the machines without so much palaver.—Ohio State Lantern.

Donates Trophy for Tennis Matches Of English and American Colleges

Another international trophy that bears the title of "The International Intercollegiate Tennis Cup," has been added to the already impressive list in that department of sport which brings together the amateur teams of great nations. This trophy is said to be very beautiful and is of the urn variety, mounted on an ebony base.

The trophy was donated by Bernon S. Prentice of Seabright, N. J., and it is intended for competition, at least biennially, between teams representing Oxford and Cambridge Universities of England and Harvard and Yale of the United States. Mr. Prentice is chairman of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and International Intercollegiate committee, and member of the Davis Cup and Selection committees and intercollegiate tennis committees of the national association. The trophy that he has donated will probably unofficially become known as the "Prentice Cup."

These matches between combined days and Thursdays, 4:00 to 6:00; Wednesday at 7:45.

MOTOR OUT COMPANY, 1120 P Street announces that it is doubling its fleet of closed cars, new models, balloon tires, etc. We will appreciate your continued patronage. Call or phone B6819.

Oxford-Cambridge and Harvard-Yale teams have been played four times and the score of the matches stands three to one, in favor of Harvard and Yale. The matches will be held alternately in the United States and England, regardless of which university holds the trophy. It is expected that the Oxford-Cambridge team will come to United States for the fifth series of contests next summer and this will mark the initial play for the new "Prentice Cup."

The International Intercollegiate committee has planned that should Oxford and Cambridge visit this country, team matches will be arranged with Princeton and Columbia Universities, Rockaway Hunting Club, Nassau, Newport Casino and the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, as well as the international event with Harvard and Yale. The English players will probably compete as individuals in the United States Intercollegiate Championships and in several other major invitation tournaments.

The donor of the trophy was graduated from Harvard University in 1905. During this year, he was President of the Intercollegiate Tennis Association, and as champion of the college and captain of the Harvard tennis team.
