SAYS HUSKERS BIG AND FAST.

Last winter The Daily Nebraskan published a clipping from an Omaha newspaper quoting an Omaha man who had just returned from the east. He was reported to have said that Notre Dame was already beginning to build up student spirit toward a football victory over Nebraska in 1924. The Notre Dame Daily promptly denied the report attributing it to the imagination of writers on The Daily Nebraskan staff. Here is a clipping from the issue of October 27 of an eastern newspaper, the Easton Daily Free press:

"Max Houser, a member of the Notre Dame squad, discussing the latter's chances for the remainder of the season, referred to the Lafayette players in New York Saturday night, referred to the game, three weeks hence, with Nebraska. 'We are out to beat the Cornhuskers this year,' said Houser. 'But we've got some job. Have you ever seen those birds? Big! Why they all ought to be with a circus side-show. Fast! Say they'll make Al Le Coney pat their dust.' Nebraska is the only eleven that defeated Notre Dame in 1922 and 1923. Before meeting Nebraska, Notre Dame must tackle Georgia Tech and Wisconsin, each of whom are hard nuts."

The article that the Notre Dame Daily criticized may have been untrue—The Daily Nebraskan did not intend to more than quote—but here is one of Rockne's players telling of the super-provess of the Huskers, and when Georgia Tech and Wisconsin still stood ahead of Nebraska on the schedule.

Evidently the Irish have been taught to believe that to defeat the Huskers this year will be the pinnacle of football achievement for them. But it would mean even more to Nebraska if the Husker eleven defeated Notre Dame a third successive year.

RESERVED FOR STUDENTS?

With the Notre Dame game two weeks off, and a special train to carry students to the game promised, students who have decided that they can afford the trip are finding that all seats in the South Bend football stands that were held for Nebraska have been sold. A number of students probably bought their seats early, but many tickets have been sold to persons who have no connection with the University. A block of seats from Notre Dame, reserved primarily for Nebraska students, was not held for them—it was thrown open to the first comers, whether or not they were students.

The number of seats held for Nebraska, 300, was too small to accommodate everyone in the state who would have gone to the game. Nevertheless, students were not warned that the few seats allotted to Nebraska were being put on sale to the public.

The result: Probably not more than 150 students will be able to go to South Bend with definite assurance that they will sit with the Nebraska section, even if they can get into the field; and the effective cheering section will be cut in half. And this comes in a year when the team needs every little advantage it can get, to win.

The students are not asking too much if they request those in charge of reservations for games away from Lincoln to hold those reservations for students unless the available seats are far in excess of student demand.

YOU VERSUS SNOBBISHNESS.
 Minnesota recently voted emphatically in favor of the suppression of snobbishness—the promotion of sociability. Her vote is an encouraging basis for an effort to root the democratic spirit into the heart of Minnesota so firmly that there shall never be any issue on the subject and never any doubt of our fellowship. We hate snobbishness and we want to get rid of it, but our task is a difficult one and one that cannot be accomplished in a day, a month, or a year. Communities have sought to blot out false pride and individuals have attempted to cure the fault in themselves. Many communities and individuals have succeeded in their attempts. Those who have failed did so because they were not willing to continue everlastingly fighting—fighting the imp which denied them full happiness in the comradeship of their fellows.

Snobbishness has often been declared to be a natural selfish tendency—an ill expression of the self-assertive instinct. Human beings are extremely liable to suspect themselves of a little superiority over others. Ego plays a vital role in much that we do and say. We seek, unconsciously perhaps, domination over other individuals and a slight seeming superiority in some respect such as wealth, social prominence, or talent is dangerously apt to make us snobbish if we do not take care.

Everyone detests the snob and yet we are often blind to the snobbish tendency in ourselves. Moreover, it is rather pleasant and comforting to be blind to our own failings. To rest snugly in the rut of our old habits is much easier than getting out and fighting them.

Ten Years Ago

The Cornhuskers, although beaten 9 to 0 at the end of the first half defeated the Ames eleven by a score of 18 to 9. The game was featured by fast open play at which the Ames players were completely out-classed.

The officers of the regiment organized an Officers' Club. Colonel Kramer was elected president. The election of the committee for the Military Ball was deferred until the next meeting because there was so much of a display of party politics. The girls' hockey teams made their first public appearance on the Athletic field. The two best teams met in a game to decide the championship between the upper and lower classesmen. The upperclassmen were victorious.

Twenty Years Ago

A rooting section of five hundred girls assisted the boys' section at the Nebraska-Iowa game Saturday. At a meeting after convocation period it was decided that no longer would the men be given all the credit for the pep at the games.

The University Jeffersonian Club met Wednesday evening for the final rally before election. A good crowd was present and it was decided to change the idea of the club in order to make the interest permanent. The life of Jefferson was to be studied and also the lives of other prominent Democrats.

There was a mass meeting at the Rock Island depot to meet the Iowa football team.
