Twenty Years Ago

A prompt response was made to the selection of the Nebraska all-class team by a team composed of the members from several of the inter-class elevens who challenged the "supposed all-class" team to a game to be played as soon as possible. Such a controversy had arisen that every one was disclaiming the responsibility of picking the team.

A Samarian red lynx, which had become the talk of the University, had arrived. It was brought to San Francisco by a returning army officer and forwarded from there. Some difficulty was experienced in getting the animal through the custom house. With the animal came the information that it lived on the chechasha berry and it was necessary to obtain some of these berries.

Other freaks that had been secured for the Annual County Fair were from those that had been existing in the University for some time. The usual fat woman and the living skeleton were to be in attendance. The famous Missouri mule and bucking exhibitions were also arranged for.

In a protest signed "An Academic" the action of the Law inter-class team in claiming the championship was denounced. The writer based his argument on three points, first, that a Law could play on the team of his class and so there was no need for a split in the sophomore class; second, the sophomore team should not be required to play off the tie with the Laws because they had already done all that any champion team had ever done in the past. The third point of the argument was that inasmuch as the Law college had only paid one dollar toward the fund to buy sweaters for the winning team, against the twenty-four dollars contributed by the Academics, the Laws by reason of their luke-warm financial support should not be considered.

Dean F. A. Burnett of the College of Agriculture was in Chicago last week attending the International Livestock Show.

Tarnish!

The word rang in her ears, echoing on every side from the calls and trumpet blasts of the wild merrymakers. She had expected to be the happiest in all that happy throng, for the man she loved had just asked her to be his wife. And then an accident revealed the startling truth—tarnish—A picture that will sound the depths of your feelings and make you a truer sweetheart when you learn how this trusting girl solved her problem.
