Ten Years Ago
The Pre-Medic Society journeyed to the State Hospital for the Insane. Just how many of the future doctors rode with the compliments of the traction company could not be determined. There were so many in the car that it presented a very sanitary and antiseptic appearance. Most of the time was spent in observing cases of insanity and listening to lectures by Chicago physicians. The second all-University party was to be held. Whether the party was to be a success could not be determined as it was said that "the students of Nebraska have a reputation for quickly becoming tired of new ideas, and it remains to be seen whether this objection will hold good when applied to this real University function." It was rumored that the faculty was to appear in a body to see themselves as they had been fifty years before. Dancing was to be the main feature of the evening, but an excellent program had been arranged. Twenty-five cents admission was to be charged.
A banquet and cabaret show had been arranged for the members of the Cornhusker football team in Omaha on December 15. The banquet was to be open to any Nebraska booster and over three hundred were expected to attend.
A "Merry Christmas Tag Day" sponsored by several campus organizations was announced. The plan was to raise a sum of money with which to aid poor families of Lincoln in having a comfortable, and if possible, a merry Christmas.
Final plans had been decided upon for the new buildings at the College of Agriculture. $700,000 was to be available within the next four years to be applied in the erection of new buildings and increased equipment.

UNIVERSITIES AND RESEARCH.
If for no other reason, it seems to us the budget now filed with the state budget commissioner is justified by that paragraph of the introduction which says, "The University cannot escape the responsibility in the fields of technical and social service, but must push forward in its program of research, of teaching, of leadership, and of service, both on the campus and off the campus, to the people of the state."
We are not easily influenced by the cry for more and larger buildings. We hold the buildings of secondary importance to the school. To us the prime essentials of a university are those things mentioned above—research, teaching, leadership.
With a certain amount of funds, the University can function as it has in the past. It can hold classes. Professors can be obtained who will teach the subjects listed in the catalogue. Students will receive degrees and will be turned loose upon the world "educated." But the University will not have contributed anything to the progress of the world, and will not take its rightful place among the great institutions of the nation.
The great commercial activities rely for much of their knowledge upon the research which is conducted in universities. The science of medicine is advanced by university men, chiefly from such places as John Hopkins. Experiments in electricity and chemistry conducted in universities change the course of human action. Political science and the social sciences are aided by university research.
The world at large hears of the University by reading of the results of these researches. If for no other reason, then for the selfish one that sons and daughters of Ohioans should be connected with a school which is contributing to the progress of the world, the legislature should grant the budget requested.
Ohio State University must take its place along with the other universities of the land which are engaged in education on a larger scale than the simple teaching of lessons in a classroom.—Ohio State Lantern.
