Visitors Unable to Solve Offensive Work of Nebraska Squad.

GOODSON AND ECKSTROM ARE LEADERS IN STARRING

Coach Kline's Cornhusker basketballers overwhelmed Ames on the Army floor Tuesday evening 37 to 17 in a game marked by good guarding by the Huskers and an offense that the Iowans seemed unable to solve.

Goodson, center, was high-point man for the Huskers with ten points, and Eckstrom second with eight. Almost every Husker managed to enter the scoring column.

Eckstrom opened the game with a pretty shot under the basket and Goodson followed with a long one.

Captain Volz furnished the thrill of the evening when he tossed one through from the center of the floor.

Eckstrom played a fine game and Goodson was hitting the basket regularly. The guarding of Captain Volz and Tipton was so close that the Iowans sometimes passed the ball for several minutes before getting a shot.

Jacobson, lanky Ames center, played a good game for the Aggies. He was the pivot around which the Ames team played.

Faculty Women's Club Calls for Applications for Scholarships

Self-supporting Junior Women Will Be Considered for $50 Award.

Among the inquiries answered in the questionnaire to be filled out by candidates, will be the year, years of attendance, occupation, major, minor, high school, date of graduation, normal schools or colleges attended, college organizations, college honors, church membership, and references.

Applications should be sent to the Secretary of the Faculty Women's club, Dean Heppner's office, Ellen Smith Hall, and will then be given to the scholarship committee, before March 15.

Candidates are reminded that it is presented not a loan, but as a gift. The reason for this, as stated in the recent report of the committee, is that "since the girl who works her way through college is debarrated from so many of the advantages and pleasures of the University, it is not deemed advisable that the student should leave the University with a large debt still to be paid."

Instructors Will Put Questions to Self-supporting Students in Classes.

AUTHORITIES REQUEST STUDENT COOPERATION

Time will be taken from regular classwork today by all instructors to present to students questions purposed to ascertain figures relative to the establishment of statistics in regard to the self-support of students in the University.

University officials urge cooperation on the part of the student body. The results can in no way reflect upon the character of the students, since they will be compiled from the entire number of answers turned in, and will not individually be cited or investigated.

More than half the students of the College of Law were found to be self-supporting in a similar questionnaire issued there a few weeks ago.

Students are urged to adhere strictly to the numbering system for ease in checking and compiling the results. Copies of the questions will be found in the Sunday and Tuesday Daily Nebraskans.

HEAR LECTURE BY BENGSTON

Geography Professor Lectures Before Arts and Science Freshmen.

TELLS OF GEOGRAPHIC INFLUENCE IN AMERICA

"Fundamental Geographic Influences in American Development," was the subject of the lecture given by Prof. Nels A. Bengston of the geography department to the Arts and Tuesday.

In a discussion of the topography of Europe, Professor Bengston explained the primitive formations of Europe. A rock area ran in horseshoe shape from what is today France into Russia.

"An example of this mountainous country is Switzerland in the heart of the Alps. This small country, known as the roof of Europe, has been made famous because of its picturesque peaks and mountain lakes.

"In a consideration of southern Europe, Greece is the oldest and perhaps most interesting of the Balkan countries. Her fertile valleys, including the historic pass of Thermopylae, have seen many westward migrations of each other, as the fertile land is scarce and over-cultivated.

Professor Bengston explained the effect of topography on the customs and architecture of a country, as in the case of Italy, Europe's boot-like peninsula. Italy, mountainous in the south and level in the northern section, has two distinct types of architecture.

"Nebraska the Beautiful" is the title of a bulletin issued by the conservation and survey division of the University of Nebraska. The booklet, which was written by Dr. G. E. Condra, director of the division, other members of the University faculty, and representative residents of the state, will be sent to any Nebraska citizen on receipt of five cents postage.

The booklet gives a broad survey of Nebraska in its agricultural, industrial, scenic and civic phases. Attractions in the prairies and the farmlands, in the climate, in the wild life, in the educational advancement and improvement of the state, are clearly described.

Care is taken, however, not to exaggerate or over-emphasize certain features of the state. Every description, every illustration, is typical of the scenes familiar to all Nebraskans.

One hundred sixteen pages are contained in the well-bound, finely illustrated booklet. It is dedicated "to the memory of the pioneers and others who contributed to the development of Nebraska and the recognition of those who purpose the things beautiful."

METHODISTS HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET

Present Opportunity for Service in Religious Work to Students.

HONOR LIFE SERVICE TEAM TUESDAY EVENING

The need and opportunity for service in religious endeavor was the key-note of the annual banquet of the Methodist students of the University in honor of the life service team sent out by the executive council of the Methodist church at the Grand hotel Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Collins J. Brocke, field secretary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church, spoke on "Aristocrats." The benefits of the work done by those who achieved greatness through religious and social endeavor was contrasted with those accruing from financial and material domination.

"The Biggest Business in the World—Ministry" was the subject of Dr. D. W. Howell's address. He illustrated its greatness in three ways of greatest importance: It is organized in every nation, state, city, town, and hamlet; the children of the parsonages are those who are doing the greatest things in the world today; the ministers of the world are engaged in the greatest work in the world, that of changing the minds of people.

Dr. Ida Bell Lewis, Foo Chow, China, in speaking on "The Way," quoted the poem by Kwei Chen, '25, China, which appeared in the Century magazine of February, in illustrating the manner in which the Chinese students are spending their extra-curriculum hours of activities in helping overcome the great problems in the Chinese cities. She urged that students aid in such work. "The work of the missionary in the foreign field," Miss Lewis declared, "is in aiding the Chinese students, and others, in ably coping with these problems."
