ENGINEERS HEAR TELEPHONE MAN

H. I. Dodson of Northwestern Bell Telephone Company Addresses Convocation.

H. I. Dodson of Omaha, acting chief engineer of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company, addressed a convocation of engineering students Friday on "The Engineer's Responsibility in the Telephone Business." He discussed the relationship between the engineer in industry and the engineer in the University, and the requirements of an engineer in meeting the problems of the telephone business.

Mr. Dodson was graduated with the degree of electrical engineer from the University of Ohio in 1907. Before his graduation he was employed by the Valley Telephone Company, Lebanon, Ohio, and the Central Union Telephone Company of Indianapolis. He later served with the New York Telephone Company at Brooklyn and Buffalo. In 1920 he came to Omaha with the Bell company. He is acting chief engineer in the absence of R. A. Gantt, University of Nebraska, '09.

Oklahoma Students Are Patrons Of Thriving Hamburger Business

Shops at Norman Require Ten Cows Weekly to Fill Short Orders.

The "Hamburger joints" of Norman, Okla., are the center of considerable attraction among the students of the University of Oklahoma. One of the local clubs is holding a debate to determine whether or not peanuts are more important than hot dogs. Other students, interested in discovering the percentage of cat or dog meat in their daily lunch, made a survey of the six stands of the city.

As a result of this investigation it was discovered that ten cows each week must be killed to supply the lovers of quick lunches. The survey showed that the total sales of hamburgers is no less in the summer than in the winter. Proprietors said that if there was any difference at all, the summer months had a larger volume of sales. One stand admitted the sale of approximately 2,000 hamburgers each week during the summer.

Sales of hamburgers during the day slowly decreases as warm weather advances. And just as slowly, the midnight habitues of the lunch stands become more numerous. The decline of the days sales is made up for by the increase in the evening business.

Midnight orders from the sorority and fraternity houses are not at all infrequent. In fact there is such a demand for this service that work is furnished for several delivery boys.

When questioned about the state of business after school was out in the spring, the proprietors said that the departure of students for their homes at the end of the winter term does not make business dull. Summer school students replace those who leave. After the summer sessions are over, the business keeps up because of the fact that there are more tourists in August and September than in the other months of the summer.
