Reporter Tells of Experience at University Broadcasting Station

"W-F-A-V, the University of Nebraska, at Lincoln. The next number will be—"are the words which operator R. A. Cushman speaks so distinctly into the microphone in the blue-curtained room in the Electrical Engineering building every Thursday evening.

Out of the room, its strained sizzling broken only by the steady, buzzing hum of the transmitting set, speed, at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, the sounds which are to be heard the same moment in Alaska, in Hawaii, in Mexico and in Havana.

Why, with only an unimpressive microphone visible before them, should the performers feel as much trepidation as if they were facing an audience in the Metropolitan Opera House. Their only hearers are Mr. Cushman and a few electrical engineering students, whose interest lies only in the thing of tubes and wires and currents behind the azure hanging? But many of them seem as apprehensive as if expecting a shower of over-ripe vegetables from the hands of the invisible listeners.

"I want to try my piece over first—you haven't got it turned on, have you?" whispers a trembling young pianist, peering suspiciously at the dark mass behind the curtain. Another player pulls her dress into place and smooths her hair as though about to face the inspection of an audience of a thousand.

The speaker of the evening clears his throat, rattles his papers, and sidles about with extreme care that every word of his speech shall be heard as clearly in Skagway, Alaska as in Dallas, Texas.

"We may have to move this, but you stay just where you are," and the singer takes notice of the cracks on the floor, on which her feet remain as if glued until the end of her last song.

Meanwhile, behind the scenes, the operator and his helpers superintend the work of transmitting set with the solicitude of parents attending a sick child. They press a button here, and adjust a knob there. They raise the volume and "listen in" with attentive intensity to sounds the "orchestra" of which are omitted a

The banquet this year is taking the place of the annual spring frolic and is to get Lincoln people better acquainted with Dean Burnett. Tickets may be secured from students of the college or from the finance office on the Ag campus.

ANNOUNCE NAMES OF TRACK TEAM

Twenty-two Men Chosen By Schulte to Go to Stanford Meet.

EXPECT WEIR AND LOCKE TO STAR IN THEIR EVENTS

Twenty-two tracksters will entrain this evening at 6 o'clock over the Burlington for Palo Alto, California, where they will meet Leland Stanford, Jr., University in an inter-sectional track meet next Saturday.

Final selection of the men to make the long trip was made late yesterday afternoon, and twenty-two of Nebraska's best track men were picked to meet Stanford. The Cardinals, long in training for the contest, are preparing for a hard battle, and records are expected to drop when the Missouri Valley Indoor champions meet the winners over University of Southern California.

Captain Everett Crites, who was unable to run in the Missouri Valley meet because of a pulled muscle, will again be in the lineup and will lead the Huskers, running in the 440-yard dash.

Ed Weir, winner of both hurdle events at Kansas City a week ago, will be entered in the high and low hurdles, and the broad jump. The football captain is expected to pull down some good time in his hurdles.

Roland Locke will pit his heels against Stanford in the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, and the 220-yard hurdles. Locke won easily in the 100-yard dash at the Missouri Valley meet, and finished close behind Weir in the low hurdles. Jimmy Lewis, cross-country captain-elect, will run in the mile and half-mile. Lewis is remembered in Valley circles by his sensational win in the half-mile at the indoor meet.

Frank Daily will be a running mate for Locke in the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, and the 220-yard hurdles. Daily was a member of the Husker relay team which drew first honors in the Valley meet.

William Hein will enter in the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash. He is counted on to furnish good competition for his running mates, Locke and Daily. Everett Scherrick is another trackster who competed in the Missouri Valley meet and who will line up with the Stanford men next Saturday. He runs the 440-yard dash.

In the distances, Coach Henry F. Schulte has Lewis, Houdersheldt, Ross, Cohen, Zimmerman, Lawson, Beckord, and Hays. Houdersheldt, will enter the half-mile, Ross will run the mile and two-mile, Cohen the mile and two-mile, Zimmerman the two-mile, Dawson the two-mile, Beckord the half-mile, and Hays the mile and two-mile. Beckord will also run the 440-yard dash.

Don Reese, hurdler, will compete in the high and low hurdles, and will run the quarter mile. Reese comes from Upland, California, and should show special delight in flashing a set of shiny spikes to the Stanford men.

"Choppy" Rhodes, Frank Wirsig, and "Duke" Gleason will lead Nebraska's field entries. Rhodes, the all-around man who finished only a few points behind the world's champion at the Illinois Relays, will enter the pole vault and the high and broad jumps.

Wirsig will be another sky-scraper, and will do a little broad-jumping in addition. Wirsig is the man who assured Nebraska of the Missouri Valley meet by placing in the pole vault. (Continued on Page Four.)

PLAN ADDITION TO NEBRASKAN

Literary Section Will Be Issued Once a Month for Remainder of Year.

WANT POEMS, ESSAYS AND SKETCHES SOON

The first of three literary supplements to The Daily Nebraskan will be issued about April 15. It is planned to make this section a permanent institution, and the editors of the publication ask for contributions from students.

The addition is to be a four-page, magazine-size supplement, and will be edited by the editor and managing editor of The Nebraskan. Only three issues will be published this year, but it will be published next year if it proves a success. The other numbers will come out about May 15 and at Commencement.

This is the first time that such a venture has been made by The Nebraskan. The editors want contributions in the form of essays, poems, and sketches, turned in at the office or mailed to reach the editor before Friday noon, April 10. All manuscripts must be typewritten, double-spaced on one side of regular manuscript paper.

"The supplement will not be a vehicle for the views of any one group," declares one of the editors. "The object is to make it interesting to read, and to this end, any point of view, whether orthodox or unorthodox, will be printed if it is well expressed. There is no limit as to length, although in view of the limited size of the paper, it is possibly best to make essays as concise as is compatible with necessary development of the subject matter. Each article, however, will stand upon its merits in comparison with the rest of the material submitted."
