

MANY FACULTY CHANGES MADE

Ninety-four New Members Are Added to Teaching Staff This Year

TWELVE ARE NEBRASKANS

There have been a great many changes made in the personnel of the faculty, a great many new instructors added, among whom is Herman G. James, professor of political science and new dean of the college of Arts and Science. Twelve of the ninety-four new members are graduates of Nebraska.

In the department of agricultural engineering, H. Lew Wallace, a research engineer, takes the place of Fred R. Nohavee. Earl G. Johnson is a new instructor. George M. Bahrt, a soil analyst, will teach agronomy.

The ancient language department has added three new members. Floyd C. Harwood is an associate professor, and Emily Ross and Josephine Indovina are instructors. The last two are graduates of this university.

In Business Administration.

Roy J. W. Ely, an instructor and secretary to the Dean in the College of Business Administration, is a Nebraska graduate, as well as Ewald T. Grethe, a new assistant professor of advertising and sales-management, and Clifford M. Hicks, a new instructor in business organization. Mr. Grethe takes the place of A. G. Hinman. Other new members in this college are Elmer C. Bratt, Vernon G. Morrison, and Ernest F. Witte, all who are scholars in business research.

Waldo Westwater, instructor in chemistry, will take C. W. Rodewald's place, and Henry I. Stubblefield, will replace Fred W. Jensen. Pleasant Ernest Roller and Ralph Nielson are fellows, and Ed. F. Deering, Ralph B. Frasier, Olive P. Hartley, Robert W. Maxwell, Charlotte T. Schneider, Carter L. Simpson, and Bess F. Whitney are scholars in this department.

Francis S. Drath, scholar, who is a Nebraska graduate, takes the place of J. A. Cameron in the department of literature.

In the department of dairy husbandry, Elmer N. Hansen will be the instructor instead of L. K. Crowe, who will take the place of E. O. Anderson.

Assistant To Dean Of Women

Elsie Ford Piper, another graduate of Nebraska, will be the assistant dean of women, while Grace M. Johnson will take Miss Helen Cook's place as secretary to the dean of women.

In the college of dentistry, William D. Wallace will be an instructor in prosthetic dentistry, the position formerly being held by B. C. Wildman.

George J. Johns is to be an instructor in electrical engineering, and Lloyd F. Rader instructor in civil engineering, replacing Don J. Young, who takes the place of Walter Scott.

Ruth Odell and Melvin Van Denbark are the only new instructors in the English department.

In elocution and dramatics, Leon Hill Connell and Ray E. Ramsey are assistant instructors, and are taking the place of Hart Jenks. Harold Felton, Pauline Gellatly, and Fern Hubbard are assistants.

Winona M. Perry is an associate professor of educational psychology and measurements.

Home Economics.

Edna Benson takes the place of Alice H. Bradt as an assistant professor in home economics. Ella M. Cushman, instructor, replaces Alma Fritcheff; Ruby Simpson, instructor, takes the place of Arabella Livington; May Frank, instructor, has charge of the home management division, replacing Ruth Staples, who is away on a leave of absence; Greta Gray, has been appointed assistant professor in the experiment station, and True Jack Colbert, is a new instructor in home economics. Miss Simpson and Mrs. Colbert were graduated from the University of Nebraska.

Gilbert H. Doane is a new librarian and Marjorie Bowers is a cataloger, replacing Robinson Spencer.

George E. Happell, Kenneth G. Fuller, and Chalmers C. Clark are scholars in the mathematics department.

College of Medicine.

The College of Medicine at Omaha have made a great many changes in the faculty. A. J. Miller is to be associate professor of clinical pathology, and Lowell Dunn is to be instructor in experimental medicine.

Adrienne Gunderson is head nurse in the hospital in place of Ruth Bartholomew, and R. R. Best is assistant in cross anatomy. Laura Redgwick replaces Marian Booth, technologist in anatomy, J. M. Christlieb, fellow in pathology, and N. C. Hartford, E. H. Wilmarth, and M. E. Wilmoth, fellows in physiology and pharmacology.

Lieutenant Colonel F. F. Jewett, the new Commandant of the cadets, is also a professor in military science and tactics, as are Captain Maurice C. Bigelow and Captain Charles A. Hoss.

The philosophy department has Katherine Alice Wolfe as graduate assistant. She replaces Nell Whalen.

At the Nebraska School of Agriculture, at Curtis, William Talbot has been appointed instructor in sciences and coach of debate, and Phillip S. Page is dairy herdsman.

Rufus Dewitz and R. W. Newman are assistants at the College of Agriculture in the department of physical education and athletics.

Physical Education.

Miriam Wagner and Dorothy Simpson are instructors in the women's department of physical education. Edna Blumenthal and Kathryn Krieg have been appointed assistants, and Lucile Huelker is the department secretary.

Fred S. Bukey, a Nebraska graduate, is an instructor in the College of Pharmacy.

In the physics department, Maurice J. Brevoort, another graduate of Nebraska, replaces B. E. Moore as instructor. George H. Graham is curator, and Harold E. Wise and E. E. Helgus are graduate assistants.

John Rosenbaum, fellow, is in the department of poultry husbandry.

Herman G. James, the new Dean of the Arts and Science College, is a professor of political science. Wilbur P. Riddlesbarger, a Nebraska graduate, is a scholar.

O. T. Doran is assistant professor in the history and principles of education, in place of G. W. Rosenlof who is away on leave of absence.

Rudge & Guenzel Co

Now that most of the girls are back to the campus, renewing old acquaintances and making new ones—and freshmen have established themselves in their various places, have their roommates chosen, and so forth—it's time to be planning a wardrobe that will please the professors (often a distinctive hat will convey the impression that there's something beneath it.) It's time to be planning—

A College Calendar

With college days come good times and friendships that last a lifetime. And in later years, the things you'll look back on are these:

Registration

You'll never forget how you stood in an endless line waiting your turn to fill out a complicated form which asked for your father's occupation, and where you went to kindergarten. You'll remember to your dying day the silvertone jersey dress, trimly tailored and daintily short that you wore. It had an inverted pleat in the front of the skirt and high collar, the height of fashion in the fall of 1925. You were sure of that because it came from Rudge & Guenzel's. So did your hat—which was a pretty little felt of pencil blue. If you were a freshman you wore a bright red chrysanthemum on your shoulder—a sign of dignity that preceded the wearing of a green button—given by Rudge's. Your oxfords were light tan, and your bag (wisely chosen) was large enough to hold tortoise shell glasses and a fountain pen.

Fixing Up Your Room

You liked your roommate at once—and she liked you. You had the same tastes. When you brought out your cretonne drapes and assured her that they would last more than two semesters, "because they're sun-fast and tub-fast," she admired them. But it was when she produced a yellow, a lavender, and a green chenille rug which blended with them beautifully, that you discovered she also did her shopping on N street—at Rudge & Guenzel Co. Whereupon you arranged the pillows, and feeling very much at home, both proceeded with your unpacking. In common you owned a great many conveniences. She had a sewing basket, you had an alarm clock. She had a laundry bag, you had an electric iron. She had a desk set, you had a red slicker. She had stationery (one must write home occasionally), you had towels (which are generally such scarce articles). All these things from Rudge & Guenzel's.

Big and Little Sister Party

As long as it was a "get acquainted" affair, you thought you'd better look your best. So you wore your black satin dress with the circular skirt that had American beauty roses applied on or near the hem and a smaller size around the long bell sleeves that were tight at the wrist. The evening was an ideal fall night and the only wrap you needed was your black fox neckpiece and, of course, you wore your new black velvet hat with the pirate brim on which were roses that matched those on your dress. The hat was a very exclusive model from the Millinery Section at Rudge & Guenzel's. Black satin pumps with sheer chiffon gunmetal hose completed your costume.

A Pajama Party

One night you entertained the crowd at your house. Eventually they became "the bunch." Your roommate was radiant in silk crepe pajamas—Japanese print. The black trousers had bands of brilliant printed crepe around the ankles. The sleeveless top of Japanese crepe had bands of black to finish the neck and armholes. You wore a fashionable nightie of silk crepe also, under your blue quilted satin breakfast coat.

You served on that adorable china tea set that you had bought at Rudge's. And the chubby china table lamp looked so cozy that you hated to put it out long enough to take a flashlight of the crowd which was so necessary for your memory book.

(Is there one among us who has not a memory book?)

I shop with you and for you.

Look At Your Hat—Everyone Else Does
Do you Ever Think of Your Hat?

If it's a cheap one, and you bought it in a hurry, you slam it on and toss it off, and forget it.
If it's a good hat and suits you perfectly, you treat it well and know it looks well.
There's pride in possession of a good hat.
