THOSE BRIGHT PEOPLE

If you do not know Smith, you probably know someone very much like him. Smith is one of those fellows who gets good grades in all his classes (although he never quite approaches the Phi Beta Kappa level) and at the same time dashes gaily about from movie to party, bridge game to joy ride, and front porch to soda fountain.
 He never lets anyone catch him studying. People like him, envy him, and talk about what he could do if he only would. Somehow or other, studies never seem to bother him and he doesn't bother them. Scores of men, and even more women, like Smith, are found on every campus, but their days of glory will soon be over.
 The professors are playing their trump card at last. For years and years they have pleaded with people like Smith to exercise their fullest powers in school work instead of merely doing that comparatively smaller amount of class work that is required of less brilliant, more nearly average students. Now the pedagogues are going to use force.
 Prof. R. D. Scott, writing in the University Extension News, outlines a new plan for instruction in freshman English which includes special provisions for people above the average. An examination at the beginning of the year is to be used as a basis for division of students into three groups.
 The best students will form a special section; those of more mediocre ability a second; and those whose preparation is wholly insufficient will be shifted to special "English Zero" classes. Thus each student will be given more nearly the type of class work for which he is fitted. The presence of slower and less competent persons will no longer enable Smith and his tribe to slide through without working.
 In the chemistry department, army intelligence tests are being used as the basis for a somewhat similar division. Other departments have various plans which accomplish much the same result. Educators may succeed eventually in discovering even better means of securing the same amount of exertion from all types of students, to displace the old system of merely demanding the same results. Smith will still be brilliant, but when it is the way in which students play the game instead of the score that counts, he will have to hustle.
 It would have been much nicer for all concerned if people like Smith would have lived up to their full capabilities voluntarily. Rigid requirements have helped average students, however, and they may improve this situation too. Smith, like his less fortunate classmates, may see the truth if he is compelled to look at it. He will realize then that play and relaxation earned by work is far superior to that which comes "like the gentle rain from heaven" more or less gratuitously.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB PLANS SCHEDULE

Tryouts Will Be Held Tuesday At Seven O'clock in the Library Building.

Plans for a more extensive schedule this year than usual are being laid for the University Men's Glee Club according to Paul Woolwine, president of the club this year. Membership in the men's Glee Club will be determined by Director Witt after two tryouts, the first of which will be held Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock in the art gallery on the second floor of the library building.
 With only about half of last year's club in school this year, an unusual opportunity is offered students to win a place in this University activity this year says President Woolwine. The men's Glee Club will again take part in the annual Missouri Valley inter-collegiate musical contests. In these contests at Kansas City last year, the Nebraska club took third place.
 Three home concerts were given last year before large audiences. Alrich Hanicke, business manager of the club, is planning to arrange a larger number of home engagements for the ensuing school year. The usual custom of occasional week-end trips to nearby communities for concerts will again be carried out. Last year during spring vacation about twenty-five members of the club made a concert tour through the southwestern part of the state. Some similar tour will be made again this year with the possibility in sight of sending the members of the club out of the state on their spring trip this year.
 After the tryouts the club will meet twice a week, probably from 7 to 8 o'clock on Wednesday evenings and from 5 to 6 o'clock Friday evenings, as in previous years. The first home concert will be given in about six or eight weeks.

DEPARTMENT ADDS NEW INSTRUCTORS

Miss Simpson and Miss Wagner Are Teachers of Physical Education.
 The physical education department of the University of Nebraska has made some changes, and added new members to its staff this year.
 Mrs. Marguerite Stott, a former member of the department, is now head of the physical education work at Brownell Hall in Omaha. Miss Mariam Wagner, who has just completed a two-year post-graduate course, at Wellesley in the department of hygiene and physical education, is one of the new members of the staff. She is interested in athletics and gymnastics, and will take charge of those classes. Miss Dorothy Simpson comes here after having completed one year post-graduate work, besides the four-year regular course, in the department of physical education at the University of Wisconsin. During the outdoor season she will assist with outdoor sports, and during the indoor season she will take charge of creative dancing.
 There are also two student assistants in the department this year. Miss Edna Blumenthal, graduate of the American gymnasium union at Indianapolis, has charge of all classes at the agricultural campus. Miss

 The best games are often played in wet, drizzly weather.
 Jupe Pluvius takes keen delight in waiting until the stands are filled, and the game started, before turning on the showers.
 The fellows, and girls, who enjoy the game best, who are comfortable, and get their money's worth, are invariably clad in Frog Brand Slickers. Most students wear them.

Kathryn Krieg, a senior in the department, is assisting with classes in sports and gymnastics on the city campus.
 There are several all around and two season sports. In this group hiking is very popular. Tennis skating, horseback riding and rifling complete the group.
 At the close of each sport season class teams are chosen from the girls having completed ten tryout practices. Points are awarded for making a place on a team, and twenty-five points to those who do not make a team, but complete the tryout practices.
 Miss Wheeler is sport coach for W. A. A. work. W. A. A. maintains an office in room 203 of the Armory. Any information will be gladly be given upon request, and women are invited to stop and get acquainted with the organization. All sport practices, and important announcements are posted on the bulletin board at the west end of the Armory, and this should be watched daily for new announcements.
 This fall a party was given for freshmen women, and a picnic will be given soon.

CORN-COBS ELECT PRESIDENT

Judd Crocker Chosen at Meeting Thursday To Head Honorary Pep Organization.
 Judd W. Crocker, '27, Omaha, was elected president of Corn-Cobs, honorary pep organization, at its first meeting Thursday evening. Jacob Arnot, '27, Pawnee City, was elected vice-president, and Richard Ross, '27, Gibbon, secretary-treasurer.
 Plans for stunts for each football game were discussed. Decision was reached that new members will be elected the week after the Illinois Nebraska football game. Sentiment was expressed in favor of making a trip either to Illinois or Missouri with the team.
 Increase Enrollment In Classic Languages
 The general revival of interest in the classic languages which is taking place throughout the Middle West is reflected in enlarged enrollment for Latin and Greek courses at the University this fall, according to Prof. John A. Rice, jr., chairman of the department of ancient languages. More than 400 students have registered for work in the department, which is the largest enrollment recorded in the past twenty years. Third year Latin classes outnumbered the others with a total of 120 students. There are twenty-five first year students in Greek, exclusive of those in Greek in English courses for students entering the scientific field. Dr. F. C. Hawood, formerly instructor in Yale University, has been appointed to the department and will conduct Latin courses this term.
