STUDENT MORALITY

Within the past few years books have become popular which tell of immorality among young people in general and university students in particular.

There is drinking and vice at all universities, of course. So is there also in any group of young people.

The students come to this university, as to all others, from all types of homes, the best and the lowest.

With such a homogeneous group as this it is natural that there are some who have leanings toward the primrose. They have their fling, and, ordinarily, they are thrown out of school.

When some students get into any trouble and the newspapers hear of it, stories are published of "wild parties by university students."

It is because of this tendency to play up the story of a student in trouble while the list of Phi Beta Kappas is given small space, together with the present deluge of driven in book form about university life, that causes the wide-spread belief that university students are particularly immoral.

But if the readers of this slush are unacquainted with university life they should remember that it is a fair cross-section of the life of the state, no better and no worse.

STUDENT OPINIONS.

Several contributions to the Student Opinion Column have been received by the editor of the Nebraskan on which there was nothing to indicate the author.

By special arrangement with the editor letters can be published anonymously or signed with initials only. If the writers of the letters now in the editor's hands will make their identity known their letters will be published.

The culture of America lies in the metropolis, according to Marcus Eli Savage, who discusses the subject of "Where is the Culture of America?" in the October issue of the Elk's magazine.

Student Opinion

The Daily Nebraskan assumes no responsibility for the sentiments expressed by correspondents, and reserves the right to exclude any communication whose publication may for any reason seem undesirable.

To The Editor:

The action of the Student Council announcing immediately the result of the honorary colonel election will mar one of the great and looked-for events of the military ball.

The action of the student council in this matter which is of direct concern to the military department for whom the sponsor is elected, and which stages the military ball is hardly to be commended.

I can understand well the motives of the election committee which were no doubt prompted by a high desire to keep the election open and above board, but it does not seem to me that there could have been a little cooperation with the cadet authorities for the purpose of having a more successful military ball.

A suggestion is offered that the student council next year withhold the announcement of the honorary colonel until the appropriate time at the military ball, as was the custom at Nebraska for many years prior to last year when the council was given jurisdiction.

SUPERIOR STUDENTS.

In the good old days all college men were thought to be superior—objectively so. That those who were placed above them looked upon them as "equals in superiority" may today seem absurd, yet that was the case.

Since the war there has been a great swelling in the student body of every college and university in the country. The country is fairly over-run with students, but unfortunately from all sides come the reports that for the most part they do not make "good student mate." So, if colleges, considering the greater cost are to maintain their standards, let alone raise them, they must separate the sheep from the goats.

This is the burden of an article by Dr. C. F. Thwing in School and Society; he advocates mental tests. At Wisconsin the first mid-semester are the means of deciding whether the student will remain in our midst or not, the psychological test has not as yet been adopted.

These are the conditions that exist, however, and the undergraduates must try to overcome them as best he can. A word to the wise—members of the class of '29 must try to so choose their several ways so as to avoid the snares and pitfalls of our modern educational system.

The ground for the Bessey building was staked out and the trees grubbed out. In order to begin the new building a house had to be moved.

The Catholic Student's Club held its first meeting of the year in the Music Hall.

One hundred students of commerce had a very successful "smoker" at the Lincoln Commercial Club building. Refreshments consisted of cider and doughnuts.

The Mystic Fish met at the Kappa Alpha Theta House.

The girls insisted on electing their own president of the senior class and announced the candidacy of Miss Grace Trigg. The co-eds said that they had been slighted heretofore and wanted something better than second place.

The University School of Music held its first recital in Memorial Hall.

Inter-fraternity baseball was one of the big groups of athletics. The fraternities were divided into two groups. Those residing north of O street and those residing south of it.

Phi Gamma Deltas won first place in the southern group, but three fraternities, Phi Kappa Psi, Phi Delta Theta and Delta Tau Delta, were tied for first honors in the northern division.

As the contest was never played off, second place was awarded to the Phi Gams and the first prize was to be held over until spring
