THOSE DEADLY PARTIES

It has almost become a tradition at this university that all-University parties are dull.

No one, it seems, has stirred out of the inertia that seems to grip those in charge of the parties to suggest a change.

It is a by-word on the campus that few students other than freshmen, (usually very rustic freshmen) attend the parties.

Just what change is needed to arouse more interest in the parties we do not know, not being at all expert on the matter of parties.

At Kansas "varsity" dances are held once a week. The charge, we believe, is seventy-five cents for couples, or $1.25 for stags.

Contrast this with the situation at Nebraska. Here one may attend any down-town dance and find the students there.

While gathering material for this editorial we asked a number of students about the all-University parties. The search was made in vain, for none had ever been to one.

"Yes," he said, "I went to one when I was a freshman. But I don't remember much about it."
To say that an all-University party can be a success is foolish.

At the present time, the university facilities do not permit the giving of large parties. Therefore, perhaps, they should not be too popular.

ANOTHER MYTH

Among the fairy stories that seem to have seized the popular mind is the one that the boy working his way through school is a better student than the one whose way is paid.

While it is true that the men who work their way through and complete the work as usually of a high caliber and succeed in later life, their task in going through school is by no means easy.

Most full-time students find that their time is well taken up by classes and study. To work outside in addition to this means ordinarily that the studies must be slighted or practically all recreation foregone.

Freshmen Scholarship
Now that the initial hubbub and scurry of registration has passed it is high time that the freshmen seriously consider their position at Stanford.

Stanford is known as a hard school into which to gain admission. Many declare that it is a terror to stay in after you have gotten over the first hump.

A few hours a day of intelligent application will work wonders with your grades. College is different from high school in that professors do not pass students on their reputations.

Freshmen owe themselves and their parents who are sending them here to apply themselves faithfully. No one wants you to be a perverted student.

Men who have been out of college in business life for many years frequently come back to take professional courses. These men have been out exchanging hard knocks with the world and know what is necessary in the fight of life.

Freshmen who take their work seriously will find that by attending classes regularly and by keeping regular "office hours" for study every day, their grades will be satisfactory.

Superintendent Chowins has drawn plans for the construction of the addition to the boiler house. It is to be in the form of a wing on the south side and is to improve facilities of furnishing light and power to the different buildings.

Ten Years Ago

So many requests came for an authorized statement in regard to the first building erected on the extended city campus, that Chancellor Avery consented to talk on the plan for Bessey Hall.

Driving the desperate Ichabods relentlessly before them the Huskers plowed their way through for seven touchdowns in their encounter with Washburn.

A football luncheon was given under the auspices of the Girls' Club to initiate the real Nebraska spirit before the football game.

The economic seminar met with a large attendance and Prof. J. E. Le-Rossignol lectured on the causes and economics of the war.

Twenty Years Ago

Dr. James T. Lees, chairman of the athletic board of control, left for Champaign, Illinois, to represent the university at the installation ceremonies of Dr. James, who was to be president of the University of Illinois.

Dr. Benton, first chancellor of the University of Nebraska, addressed a convocation. He was chancellor from 1870 to 1876, and came from Butler College, Indianapolis.

Practice three weeks try-outs and practice the glee club was finally selected. Of 200 men who tried out about seventy-five were selected.
