All About "Wimmin."
That the college man is a distinct type most everybody has observed. His is a character that draws attention anywhere; with his collegiate (frankly we can't find another word to describe it) manner of dress and deportment, and his juvenile sophis-tication he goes among his fellow creatures with a demeanor that makes them take unmistakable notice. They may smile at his antics. They may be horrified. But they never fail to observe him and set him apart from themselves. Such is the recognition which the idiosyncrasies of the undergraduate have won for him that books are being written about him—and books now-days are written only about very highly developed types.

But, however college youth differ from the rest of the world, among themselves they are extraordinarily alike. They wear the same cut of clothes and smoke the same kind of pipe. They are tremendously versed in the ways of the world, know all about 'wimmin,' and can utter with almost perfect nonchalance "that sort of thing." And, like all types, they are eager to perpetuate their kind. It pains the college senior—who has reached the climax in becom-ing collegiate—to see the adoles-cent freshman become naively excit-ed over the curious things that hap-pen to him. The upperclassman, though already burdened with the enormity of his own experience which weighs down his shoulders like a titanic feather bed, will unselfishly come to the relief of the newcomer. The neophyte is taught how to be-come like his superiors, and he in turn hands down the traditions to his successors.

There are many things making for a continuation of this uniformity or standardization of college men. One is the effect of the routine of the machinery of the institution itself. A large group of men are taking the same courses and fulfilling the same requirements for degrees. An-other, and more potent influence, is participation in extra-curricular ac-tivities with the attendant develop-ment of college spirit and solidarity. These activities, as well as the cur-riculum itself, vary little in the vari-ous institutions. It is almost inevit-able that the ideas and actions of the men should run in similar chan-nels.

We can see no compelling reason to bemoan this obvious trend towards standardization of the college youth. Perhaps that is one result of being exposed to the operation. At any rate, there are many less pleasant things to contemplate than to see one's self fall into that class which is included in the term "collegiate." On the other hand, it is undoubtedly true that the process of creating a smooth, glistening youth out of every freshman who enters an institution of higher learning lulls or oppresses his individualistic impulses and may fatally affect his accomplishments. It is no simple problem.—The Colum-bian Spectator.

Why You Need This Guide
"It is safe to say that the failure to guide and direct study is the weak point in the whole educational machine." Prof. G. M. Whipple, U. of Michigan.
"The successful men in college do not seem to be very happy. Most of them, especially the athletes are overworked." Prof. H. S. Canby, Yale.
"Misdirected labor, though honest and well intentioned may lead to naught. Among the most important things for the student to learn is how to study without knowledge of this his labor may be largely in vain." Prof. G. F. Swain, M. I. T.
"To students who have never learnt "How to Study," work is very often a chastisement, a flagellation, and an insuperable obstacle to contentment." Prof. A. Inglis, Harvard.
"HOW TO STUDY" will show you how to avoid all misdirected effort. Get a good start and make this year a highly successful one by sending for this hand-book and guide NOW.

Adds Gloss and Lustre, Makes Your Hair Easy to Manage

Glostora

IF you want to make your hair natural gloss and lustre. A large bottle of Glostora costs but a trifle at any drug store or toilet goods counter. Try it! You will be delighted to see how much more beautiful your hair will look, and how easy it will be to manage.

Just put a few drops of Glostora on the bristles of your hair brush, and brush it through your hair when you dress it. You will be surprised at the result. It will give your hair an unusually rich, silky gloss and lustre—instantly.

Glostora simply makes your hair more beautiful by enhancing its natural wave and color. It keeps the wave and curl in, and leaves your hair so soft and pliable, and so easy to manage, that it will stay any style you arrange it, even after shampooing—whether long or bobbed.

A few drops of Glostora impart that bright, brilliant, silky sheen, so much admired, and your hair will fairly sparkle and glow with
