THE RALLIES AGAIN

To The Editor:
Yesterday an article appeared in the Student Opinion column of the Daily Nebraskan asking what had happened and what had become of Nebraska spirit. The author of this article was no doubt uninformed on some of the statements he made, however, he was correct in some of them. The criticism was made that the welcoming home rally for the team on their return home from Illinois was mismanaged. Those who were in charge of that rally were not able to tell exactly where the train would stop and which car the team was in. The crowd was far too large to have the members of the team speak. Do we Nebraskans have to have the football team speak to us every time they win a game? No, they did their speaking on the Illinois gridiron. Neither does a team after a hard journey care to be jostled by a big crowd on its return from hard game. That team was tired and anxious to get home and so they did as most of us would do, evaded the crowd and went home to attend to their studying and other things that they had to do. Loyal Nebraskans should be glad and feel honored in being accorded the privilege of meeting the team without them having to get up and "pat themselves on the back."
Profanity never was and never will be the very essence of Cornhusker spirit. If, we, to show our spirit and to gain that "never-say-die spirit," must have profanity in our yells then we must be in a sad state of affairs indeed. One must have a small mind to not be able to think of something besides profanity that would serve to instill that Nebraska spirit in us. When those pretending to be loyal Nebraskans wake up to the fact some of these days and show some of that spirit it will be readily seen that profanity has no place in college spirit. We pride ourselves on our welcoming spirit to our visiting teams "We don't give a damn for the whole team of Notre Dame" is a fine and conclusive manner in which to show our welcoming spirit.

Nebraska is far above such high school stuff. May the student body of Nebraska always be courteous and hold a welcoming spirit for their visiting teams, but let them always be the hardest fighting, most loyal and spirited student body in the country. Still another criticism was made, that a certain fraternity had a monopoly on the cheer-leader situation. Everyone was eligible to tryout for cheer-leader and it was advertised in this manner. Very few men but the freshmen and previous cheerleaders even attended the tryouts. The selection from which to choose was very small and there is no doubt but that the best men were selected for these positions. If any certain fraternity can get their men to come out for these cheer-leader try-outs and work earnestly for those positions they are to be commended, not criticised. The positions are open on a competitive basis just as the different positions on the football team are. It would indeed be folly for anyone to criticize a certain fraternity because it had had several men on the team in the past few years. The cheerleading situation is the same situation exactly. The best cheer-leader in the world could not make the students cheer who do not feel a loyal and a fighting spirit tingle all through their bodies. Cheering should come voluntarily and should only be supervised and directed. Without this, supervision and direction are of no avail.

One often hears some man or woman of this University make this remark, "I have a date tonight and I won't have time to go to the rally." This is one of the major causes for a lack of spirit among Nebraska students. A great part of them live for that "fluffy-haired" little girl or that "dear shiekish-looking fellow." They are too selfish to give up some little personal pleasure or even delay it to do only what a loyal, honorable and true Nebraskan should do. One has to only look around at the rallies and you can see that certain sororities and fraternities have few if any of their members there at the rally. Even those who live right on the campus are not represented. It is not that the rallies do not have proper publicity that they are not there, because the Daily Nebraskan is full of rally stories a week before the rally. Either the majority of Nebraskans do not realize their duty or they are too lazy and selfish to fulfill it. But, they expect their football men to spend two or three hours a day grinding away in the cold and rain to produce a winning football team, and still they feel that they are too busy to give thirty minutes of their time to attend a rally and to cheer at the game. This situation appalls the writer of this article. Let's all attend one of these rallies and cooperate with the cheer-leading efforts of the cheerleaders and then the story may be a different one.

If the fraternities and sororities would take this matter up themselves and be loyal Nebraskans enough to at least attend the rallies the matter of spirit would probably adjust itself. We Nebraskans should bury our faces in shame after what four of our football men and Coach Schulte said at

True-False Examinations
Students almost invariably hail with delight the announcement of an instructor that their next examination is to be of the famous "true and false" type. That dread which prefaces so many tests is lifted from their minds and they often decide that the evening which was to have been spent in careful review may be devoted to more pleasing pursuits. They know that much less preparation is necessary to successfully pass this type of examination.
Too many instructors are given to using the "true-false" test as a measure to gauge the extent of their pupils' knowledge. Without a doubt it is far easier to grade papers of this kind, that the test is more enjoyable for students and teachers alike and renders a highly objective method of judging the knowledge of the former. Yet it is in the end but a test of recognition, not one of detailed knowledge.

There are certain individuals whose minds are so constituted that they can determine without any great mental effort whether or not a question is right or wrong. But these same persons are utterly incapable of writing an examination of the ability to organize and handle in a logical manner the information that they are expected to possess. For such persons the shorter examination is no real measure of ability but is merely a means to test their recognition of certain facts which a casual reading has made them vaguely familiar.

Besides, there is always the alternative of guessing at the answer, of standing a "fifty-fifty" chance of guessing correctly. And, although we are supposedly on our honor at Kansas, yet it is undoubtedly true that it is easier to observe whether or not the one beside us puts down a plus or minus sign than it is to absorb in one glance the content of several paragraphs of writing. In fact, the student finds that he must exert strict self-control if he is to keep his eyes continually on his own paper when a test of the former type is being given.

And it is unfair to those who are able to organize and see the relationship between the various elements of the course to subject them to a measure of this sort. Lastly, there is no doubt but that frequent "true-false" examinations lead to slovenly, careless habits of thought and loose, disjointed thinking.—University Daily Kansan.

Keeps Your Hair Neat— Rich-looking and Orderly
IF your hair lacks natural gloss and lustre, or is difficult to keep in place, it is very easy to give it that rich, glossy, refined and orderly appearance, so essential to well-groomed men. Just rub a little Glostora through your hair once or twice a week,—or after shampooing, and your hair will then stay, each day, just as you comb it.
Glostora softens the hair and makes it pliable. Then, even stubborn hair will stay in place of its own accord.
It gives your hair that natural, rich, well-groomed effect, instead of leaving it stiff and artificial looking as waxy pastes and creams do. Glostora also keeps the scalp soft, and the hair healthy by restoring the natural oils from which the hair derives its health, life, gloss and lustre.
Try it! See how easy it is to keep your hair combed any style
