

Establish Etiquette Class
A social etiquette class for men will be established at the Oklahoma A. & M. college.

A short course in home economics for housewives is given by radio and correspondence at the University of Wisconsin.

There is nothing the home folks would appreciate more than a really good photograph of yourself. A glimpse into Townsend's display windows on South Eleventh street will demonstrate the superiority of their portraiture. Here "you will always find familiar faces."—Adv.

HEAR TAYLOR AT VESPER SERVICE

Missionaries and Their Methods of Work Is Subject of Weekly Talk

IN INDIA FOUR YEARS

"We don't need to press agent the Lord, he will take care of himself. The whole campaign of Christianity can be conducted on Jesus Christ and His teachings," stated L. Wendell Taylor at Vespers Tuesday evening in talking on the subject of missionaries and their methods of work and the need of a true Christianity.

Mr. Taylor has spent four years in India and is in the United States on a year's furlough. He is speaking at colleges and universities in the United States in the interest of the student volunteer movement. He was brought to the University of Nebraska under the auspices of the student volunteer movement of which Dorothy Thomas is president.

"The world really does move. One hundred years ago it took a missionary from the United States six months to make the trip to India and now I hope to make the trip in six weeks by airplane," stated Mr. Taylor. "One line of thought that probably changes the slowest in this world today is the thought along religious lines. Two thousand years ago a force came into this world which has never been appreciated and has never been used to its greatest advantage."

Missionaries have made the most use of this great force, he pointed out, but they too bite their lips in scorn at themselves and their work when they think of the great example of Jesus Christ.

Must Cut Themselves Free
If missionaries want to gain results they must cut themselves free from this civilization which is colloquially called, Christianity, in the western world and bring Christianity in its true sense to the people of the Orient. It cannot be resisted in its true form by the heathen peoples.

"We have toned Christianity down and diluted it until it no longer resembles the teaching of our Christ. You must never lose sight of the kernel of the whole matter that the appeal of Christianity lies in the individual heart. It is impossible to convert a multitude without touching the individual heart," asserted Mr. Taylor.

Some think there is waiting to be born in the Orient a conception of Christ and Christianity far above the idea in the western world. If the Christian church is going to be unable to carry the responsibility of carrying forth Christianity then it will become a passing thing. The time has come when we must face this question of Christianity and tear down what stands between us and our Lord," concluded Mr. Taylor.

The vesper services were led by Romaine Dickinson and the special music included a vocal solo by Constance Stevens accompanied by Blanche Stevens.

TODAY'S CONVOCATION IS ONE OF MANY MEETINGS

New England World Court Committee is sending out special letters requesting each campus to make a full study of the reasons the vote on the national student poll turned out the way it did on that campus. A list of likely influences on the vote will be enclosed and each committee will be expected to canvass as many students as possible to find out which influences were the strongest in determining the vote.

One of the major reactions of students to this whole program is the fact that they refuse to agree lightly to America's entrance into the World Court, but are demanding a full statement on both sides of the question, which proves that they are really thinking the matter through to intelligent conclusions. This is also shown in a letter that has reached headquarters from the Southern World Court Committee reporting that "students all over the South are asking for arguments against the World Court—or, I might say, both for and against"—and requesting to be supplied with questions on World Court for debates that would bring out the arguments pro and con. "They simply want some honest, and keen opposition to cope with in order to come to real convictions."

Comments Come From Every State

Comment on all this World Court from corners of every state. One of activity among students comes from the East to be received was this wholly unsolicited estimate of the student conferences from Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War:

"I hope you will permit me to express my enthusiastic approval of the plan to have this series of student conferences on the World Court. The President is doing his full share and the pressure of public opinion alone can prevent the destruction of his generous policy by a group of irreconcilable senators. Public opinion is powerful when coordinated and is led. The duty of leadership, it seems to me, belongs to the academic and religious groups of the country. We now have a chance to demonstrate a great and wholesome truth, viz., that the colleges of the country do count for wise and rational things and I hope the demonstration will be complete. These conferences will help to make it so."

"Doom of the Self-Made Man"

An answer to the blustering, pompous "self-made" man is found in an analogy drawn by Richard J. Walsh in the University of Idaho Argonaut. Walsh shows that twenty years hence a man must have a college education to triumph in business, just as the doctors and lawyers of today to succeed must have had professional education. Walsh's views follow:

"I am a self-made doctor. I never went to a medical school. I learned all the medicine I know in the great university of human suffering. I began as an orderly in a hospital, and rose by watching doctors work, trying harder than the other fellows, and selling myself to my superiors. Today I am head of my own institution and have the largest practice in the state."

It sounds absurd, doesn't it? You would brand as a quack any physician who talked so. We do not let such men tamper with our bodies. Now let's change a few of the words:

"I am a self-made lawyer. I never went to law school. I learned all the law I know in the great university of human frailty. I began as a clerk in an office, and rose by working with lawyers, trying harder than the other fellows, and selling myself to my superiors. Today I am head of my own business and have the largest practice in the state."

Not quite so absurd; many of us know lawyers trained in that way. But few of us would retain such lawyers for a serious and intricate suit. Change the nouns once more:

"I am a self-made captain of industry. I never went to college. I learned all the business I know in the great university of human nature. I began as a workman in a factory, and rose by watching the operations, trying harder than the other fellow, and selling myself to my superiors. Today I am head of my own business and do the largest business in the state."

And that doesn't sound absurd at all—to the older generation. It is beginning to offend the ear of the younger men. In the era just past we have listened often and with respect to the biography of the self-made business leader, and have rated his boast as an honorable one. Twenty years hence it will sound as crude and incongruous to talk of self-made doctors. We will not let men who have no professional business training tamper with the delicate organism of industry, with the critical balance of supply and demand, and with the human destinies of thousands of workers.

The doom of the self-made manager will not be decreed by law or boycott. The inexorable hand of competition will thrust him away. One by one those who have learned the management of other men only by the slow and costly method of hunch and mistake will yield their desks to executives who have been professionally trained.—The Daily Palo Alto.

Northwestern Has "Dateless Nights"

In a recent assembly of the women students of Northwestern University, it was decided to continue the custom of "dateless nights," which was originated four years ago. Dean Richardson, who addressed the women at the mass meeting, commended them upon their action, and their business-like attitude in keeping social events in their proper place.

The dean said, "There are times for study, times for recitation, and times for dates. It seems that Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights are not too many to set aside for study." On these stated evenings no man student is to associate in any social capacity with a woman student after 6 o'clock. The school

Oklahoma Considers Examination Rules

New rules are being seriously considered in regard to the conduct of final examinations at the University of Oklahoma. A complete set of rules, under the title "Proposed Regulations to Govern the Conduct of following suggestions:

It is proposed that students more than five minutes late shall not be permitted to take examination without special consent of the proctor in charge; one or more proctors be provided for large classes in addition to the instructor; that the university furnish all quiz books, for which a nominal fee shall be collected from each student at the beginning of each semester; and that students be seated if possible in checker fashion.

The Proper Thing To Do

Lou gazed admiringly at Jo who was devoting her entire interest to the toasted cheese sandwiches and orange pekoe.

"You're a perfect wonder, Lou. Anyone else who bought six pairs of slippers at one time would have shopped for them all over town, buying one pair one place and another pair somewhere else."

"Yes, and then they wouldn't have been fitted comfortably," laughingly replied Jo. Months ago I learned the proper and clever thing to do when in need of shoes was to go direct to Rudge & Guenzel's. There you can be fitted by experts who will always give you the correct size and proper last. It's simple then to buy as many pair as you require and you can always be sure of a neat, comfortable fitting shoe.

"They are featuring 21 styles of shoes this week at $7.50, so to select six pairs is a very simple matter."

"It's a great aid to scholastic efficiency"

ONE professor makes this remark, and countless others are saying the same thing. They know the value of a typewriter as a time-saver, as a means of compiling data, and as a help in the expression of thought. Then too, it frees the "prof" from that tedious task of deciphering longhand, and keeps him in perfect "reading humor." And perfect "reading humor" tends to mean better marks.
