A WORLD COURT POLL

A committee of the Christian Associations purposes to conduct a school-wide poll to get a full expression of student opinion on the World Court. The Daily Nebraskan has refused to conduct such a poll because it was thought, because of past experiences, that only a few students particularly interested in the matter would vote. In the present case, however, the matter will be carried on in the class rooms and a vote by all the students is expected.

The Daily Nebraskan is glad to endorse this poll and will give it support by printing information as to the ballot which will be used, facts relative to the issues involved, and the results of the poll. Student interest in foreign affairs should be fostered, we believe. If students read the various questions on which they will be asked to vote, they will get some information as to the status of this country with respect to the Court and gain some idea of our possible relations with an instrument for world peace.

The ballot which will be given students will contain three bases for entrance into the World Court as well as a chance to vote flatly against it. It will require more than a superficial study of these proposals to vote intelligently upon them. The Nebraskan will aid students in getting concise and accurate information on these points. Students should read the informative articles which are to be run since the ballot will be useless if not intelligently marked.

TO KNUTE ROCKNE

The editorial from the South Bend News-Times criticizing the attitude of Nebraska followers toward the Notre Dame team seems to have had some rather serious results. We were at first reluctant to consider the editorial seriously, and believed it to be the spouting off of some ill-informed person who had not attended the game. Knute Rockne, we thought, would fly to Nebraska's defense and explain the whole thing. But Knute has shown a singular hesitation to defend Nebraska. Because he is a real sportsman, we are inclined to treat the charges with more respect when Knute fails to deny them.

Possibly someone did hurl insults at the Notre Dame players, and perhaps some misguided merchant did put up a sign saying "These rough-neck Irish shall not pass." The insults, of course, cannot be explained; but the sign, if such there was, was probably more the result of thoughtlessness than of any attempt to antagonize the Notre Dame followers. One newspaper had an explanation, that, while it seems far-fetched, might be the correct one. It was suggested that the writer of the editorial, or his informant, sat among some of our Nebraska Klansmen, and that their prejudices overcame their sportsmanship to such an extent that they did boo or hiss the Notre Dame players. The fact that Notre Dame is a Catholic school, and its football players are mostly Catholics, might have inspired some devotees of the ghostly sheet to hiss when Notre Dame came on the field.

The University of Nebraska, obviously, cannot be responsible for the religious prejudices of those who attend its football games. Few students, we know, entertain such silly prejudices and they regret exceedingly the rift that has come into the previously friendly relations between the two schools. Notre Dame and Nebraska have always been great rivals, but, as far as the students are concerned, that rivalry has never been other than in the finest spirit. The rally the night before the game should have demonstrated that. The crowd at the rally was largely made up of students and the welcome given to the Notre Dame players was enthusiastic and sincere. And at the game the next day a roar, not of bitterness, but of genuine welcome went up from the student section when the Notre Dame team came on the field.

We hope that Knute Rockne and the athletic board of the South Bend school will not allow the possible ungentlemanliness of a few religious fanatics to influence them in their decision regarding the athletic relations between the two schools. Notre Dame and Nebraska have been on friendly terms too long to allow such a small matter, and one with which the school can have no concern, to end their relationship.

THE MAGAZINES

The college student, with studies and social activities, has little time to read. What reading he does, however, is likely to be of a type not exactly conducive to culture. Too often the magazines are of the western story or detective story type.

There are a number of magazines which the student would profit by reading. Such magazines as The Century, The Atlantic Monthly, The Nation, Time, and The American Mercury are well worth reading. For information about affairs on other campus we suggest The New Student or The American Campus, both of which offer an excellent combination of fact and comment.

Fraternities might do well to subscribe for a few worth-while periodicals. They would thereby offer the brothers some good literature and lessen the drain on the pocketbooks for Western Story and Flynn's.

ped in and enjoyed the entertainment wholly unsuspected by the girls. A carnival was given by the students of the School of Agriculture under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Seventy-six dollars was raised for the purchase of football sweaters for the School of Agriculture football team. The members of the University Rifle Team received medals for the second and third highest scores in the inter-collegiate matches.

Buy Records Instead of Paddles. One of the fraternities at the University of Iowa recently instructed its pledges to buy phonograph records with the money that would have been used for the purchase of paddles.
