It is expected that the number of fraternities represented in the meet will not exceed thirty-two, the number used in the bracket last year. It will be necessary for each fraternity to enter their teams Saturday, February 13, as the drawings will be made Saturday afternoon, and published in The Daily Nebraskan Sunday morning. HUSKERS AGAIN PLAY BLUEJAYS

Complete Shake-Up Necessary To Rebuild Crumbling Defense of Team

OFFER DOUBLE PROGRAM

The Nebraska basket toppers returned to Lincoln Wednesday morning smarting under their second defeat in the conference this season. Coach Bear's men could not locate the basket Tuesday night against the Kansas Aggies and the result was that the Huskers returned on the short end of a 41 to 25 score.

Coach Bear indicates that there will be quite a shake-up in the Nebraska line-up when the team takes the floor Saturday night against the Creighton Bluejays. This will be the second contest between these two teams, the Huskers having previously defeated the Creighton team in Omaha.

In all probability a new combination will be started against the team from Omaha. Nebraska has been weak on offense the entire year, but the defense has been able to keep the last two games have seen the crumbling of the defense and complete shake-up may be necessary to again build up the team.

A double athletic program will be offered to Nebraska fans Saturday night. The basketball game between Creighton and Nebraska will get under way at 7:30 o'clock and will be followed by the Kansas-Nebraska wrestling meet.

Much interest has been stirred up in Omaha over the coming game between the Huskers and Blue Jays and it is possible that a special train will be run from the Nebraska metropolis to Lincoln for the game. If a special is run, it will mark the first time in Creighton's history that basketball aroused enough interest to make possible such an excursion.

CHINESE LOOK TO AMERICANS AS EXAMPLES

Oriental Will Learn to Live Christ-like Lives Mainly By Imitation

STUDENTS AID IN WORK

Chinese Women, Educated in America, Work Out Kind of Activities Conditions Call For

"If western people in China would live more Christ-like lives, it would give the Chinese a better understanding of what Christianity is," asserted Miss Vera Barger in an interview on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Barger is physical education director of the Y. W. C. A. in China, and is a visitor on the campus of the University of Nebraska, enroute for San Francisco, where she will sail for China, after about a year's furlough in the United States. She was graduated from the University of Nebraska with the class of 1911 and went to China in 1920.

Christianity Great Influence

"Way out in the west of China," related Miss Barger, "there were a group of young boys in a government school who had a British man for a teacher. He took so much interest in them and was so kind to them that the boys finally became confident that there must be something different about the thing that meant so much to him—Christianity. One of these boys was Jim Yem, who is now a graduate of Yale and an organizer and director of the mass educational movement in China. This British man didn't talk about Christianity—he lived a Christian life.

"We work in China just like Y. W. C. A. workers in the United States," pointed out Miss Barger, in explaining the methods used in Y. W. C. A. work. "I go into the schools and talk about the same things that I would talk about in the United States, emphasizing ideals and good sportsmanship. I work in the Chinese government schools where the graduates of the Y. W. C. A. physical education department of Gingling college at Nanking are teaching."

"I am the national promoter of physical education in China, that is I direct physical education and recreation for the Y. W. C. A. Most of my time," stated Miss Barger, "I spend in working with the physical education workers in various parts of China, talking at educational association meetings, teachers institutes and working with groups of the physical education teachers in the city."

Students Not All Christians

"How do workers in the schools help to Christianize students? We have a wonderful spiritual life in our Y. W. C. A. schools," stated Miss Barger. "We require work in religious education but do not insist our students become Christians."

"The teachers in the government schools, where they are allowed to do something, are instrumental in bringing Christians speakers to speak at the school, in interesting the girls in the Y. W. C. A. and urging them to attend church.

"The thing that I am hoping most to do when I return to China," related Miss Barger, "is to get a young Chinese woman worked into my position as director of physical education of the Y. W. C. A. in China. We have in mind a Chinese girl who has had two years at the University of Wisconsin. The thing that I want them to do is to work out the kind of activities that they know Chinese women need and not take the physical education system of the west and transplant in the east."

"As I travel around helping the students, the graduates of our school who are working in the government schools, I find that they do the most good by living Christian lives. Actions speak louder than words."

ENGBERG DOES NOT ENDORSE LAX RULINGS

Harvard's Plan of Allowing Seniors Voluntary Attendance Not Feasible

FEW SUCCESSFUL CASES

Imitation of Upperclassmen Would Cause Decreasing Attendance In Lower Classes Also

Granting the occasional genius the permission to carry courses under the personal direction of the instructor without reference to regular class work is one thing; granting an entire class permission of promiscuous absenteeism is another," declared Executive Dean Carl C. Engberg today, commenting on the recently inaugurated plan at Harvard university of allowing the seniors freedom from binding rules on class attendance.

"From one point of view it seems childish to require grown men to adhere to fixed schedules," he continued. "On the other hand, the Harvard scheme does not seem to be logical. It is intended to be a means of permitting the development of originality by failing to hold a student to regular classes.

"This attempt to give special liberties to seniors is merely an offset of attempts in many schools to grant special privileges to the brilliant students. The plan applied to all seniors is not feasible. The average person is unable to get along unless he follows a routine which is killing drudgery to the genius."

That some men like Upton Sinclair might have been saved from their present cynical, disgruntled state of mind is possible in the opinion of Dean Engberg, had they been allowed to browse in their knowledge. That exceptional men on any campus should be allowed some freedom is not denied. An example was cited of a student on this campus who proved himself too brilliant for ordinary methods of advancement. He was allowed to proceed at will, under the direction of a regular instructor.

"Only one man at most out of a thousand is capable of profitably planning his own way," he repeated. Instances of the trial of the Honors System, wherein picked brilliant men are allowed to do independent work, have proved successful. A move allowing voluntary class attendance may gain headway in eastern schools which are largely dependent on final examinations for grading. Little attention is paid at present to class attendance in schools in that section. It is unlikely that in state schools rules regarding class attendance will be discarded.

"In my own experience, the effect of such a system would be had from this point of view: One of the greatest troubles in fraternities comes from the example set by brilliant seniors accustomed to going their own way. Younger men in college feel that they can follow the same plan. Allow an entire class freedom in class attendance—the effect will be noticed in decreasing attendance in lower classes. They will try to establish themselves on the same plane.

"So long as we are living with other people," he concluded, "it is necessary for the public good for us to conduct ourselves and our habits in a manner that will not lead others into wrong ways. Selfish individualism should subordinate itself, especially so long as the exercise of it does not produce any good either to the person or the public."

WORLD FORUM HEARS BARKER ON "EUGENICS"

Scientific Study of Heredity Will Better Human Race Declares Professor

COMPARES TWO FAMILIES

Laws Preventing Breeding of Morons Proves Only Method of Checking Growing Menace

Urging a program for a race betterment based on the science of eugenics, Professor F. D. Barker yesterday addressed the World Forum at the Grand Hotel on the subject, "Eugenics and Its Relation To Human Betterment."

Dr. Barker stated that he could but briefly outline the subject, giving a sample which might lead to intelligent study by those interested. "Eugenics," declares Dr. Barker, "is a body of knowledge having to do with race betterment. It is a science made up of data collected from investigations with plant and animal life, family histories, and biological phenomena observable under the microscope."

In showing the effect of heredity on the race, Dr. Barker pointed out two families. One was a disolute family, and of the 2004 descendants to date there have been 310 paupers, 600 feeble-minded, 300 immoral women, and 110 criminals. There has not been a single soldier nor a person with a common school education at any time from this family.

Contrasting with this family, which he stated, had cost society over two million, five hundred dollars, Dr. Barker showed in brief the history of the descendants of Jonathan Edwards. All had won respectable places and included in their number were thirteen college presidents.

After pointing out biological facts, which determine heredity, Dr. Baker called attention to the fact that the descendants of all morons are morons. "Morons," he said, "is the stream that is giving most of our trouble. Our criminals, paupers, etc., are born not made on the whole. We must attack the problem at the root from the standpoint of eugenics and heredity.

"We are making a tremendous mistake in our immigration laws. They should be based on quality rather than quantity. We must not confuse low intelligence with illiteracy. It is the swarming throngs of people of low intelligence that pour into this country that constitute a menace to our civilization.

"The birth rate of the undesirables in this country is seven to every two desirables. How long at this rate will it be until there is a great cataclysm?"

In answering the question how to stop the danger, Dr. Barker pointed out that they must stop breeding. He then cited an Italian valley in which the proportions of undesirables was beginning to be a menace as it is in America today. They passed laws stopping the breeding of morons and in one generation the undesirable class was practically removed.

Dr. Barker then advocated the following measures as a program for race betterment:

1. Education—both of individuals and of legislators.
2. Eugenic laws to insure clean bills of health and of pedigrees.
3. Immigration laws based on quality.
4. Paying closer attention to environment to eliminate evils arising from bad environment which bring out undesirable tendencies that might otherwise be concealed.

BURNETT ATTENDS ANNUAL MEETING

As Member of Executive Committee Will Confer With President Coolidge Thursday

Dean E. A. Burnett of the College of Agriculture, will attend the annual meeting of the executive committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges, at Washington, D. C. February 10 and 11. The executive committee will call upon President Coolidge Thursday to discuss some of the matters concerning the association.

Dean Burnett has been attending meetings at Ohio State University since the latter part of last week. Last Friday he addressed a meeting of farmers at Columbus. Dean Burnett will go to Washington from Columbus, and he will probably return to Lincoln Saturday morning.
