From the fact that fraternities fail to live up to their ideals one need not infer that the institution is an entire failure. Though fraternities fail to promote scholarships and morals they do to some extent encourage friendship. Often many life-long friendships are formed in the fraternities. The social training that some men receive is also of value.

But the principles listed above are the real ideals of the fraternities of today. If the fraternity men would recognize this and cease to spout in fine generalities, they would not only be honest with themselves, but they might also do something to beetter the principles.

NOT WORRIED

Floyd Simonton, of the University of Kansas, refused to accept a Phi Beta Kappa key because he considered the prevalent system of grading a false criterion of scholarship and a dangerous foundation for intellectual idealism and achievement. The national secretary of the society, in replying to Simonton, says.

"In the last three years, so far as I am aware, only three students have declined to accept membership in Phi Beta Kappa. Two of these were .....During the same period, we have had about 6,000 acceptances; hence the declinations do not bulk very large and Phi Beta Kappa is not at all worried....... It is a very simple matter, of course, for a young man to manifest a supercilious attitude toward Phi Beta Kappa......You can readily see that we do not worry at all when they take this attitude. Phi Beta Kappa will not miss them."

It is a poor reply for the secretary of the great scholastic fraternity to make. It neither weakens the convictions of those who agree with Mr. Simonton nor strengthens the arguments for Phi Beta Kappa and the grading system. Much more good might have been done if the national secretary had pointed out Simonton's inconsistency in registering for the courses based on the grade system accepting a college degree awarded on a basis of grades, and refusing ar honor determined chiefly in the sam manner. If the system is a "false sterion," as Mr. Simonton believes PM Reta Kappa keys are undobuted y misrepresentative, but so are the a school diplomas, teachers' cer-Tinty and college degrees.
