Fasting Students Found to Have Less Mental Activity by Chicago Professor

Can you rise to greater poetic heights and to clearer regions of thought on an empty stomach than on a square meal? From earliest times persons have claimed they reached rare esthetic levels by forswearing food, and now a scientist has set out to study the facts.

J. A. Glaze of the University of Chicago tested the psychological effects of fasting on a number of subjects and reported the results to the American Psychological Association recently. Two men and a woman lived on water alone for from ten to thirty-three days.

One of the most important facts determined was that the mental efficiency of all the subjects as shown by their performance of tests decreased during the fast in five of the tests out of the total of seven. The average loss in efficiency in comparison with the period before and after the fast, ranged from 1 to 24 per cent.

The subjects, however, gained in bodily steadiness during the fast, especially after they had been foodless for a week or more. They were able to point more steadily at small holes with a pointer. They could stand at attention, blindfolded and with vision, for two minutes at a time, with somewhat less wabbling than before the fast.

"The after effects of fasting," Mr. Glaze said, "are beneficial in many ways. One's mental activity seems to be increased, but this only takes place after the fast is over."

The subjects described their various experiences during the fast in diaries which they kept. One of them recalled his dreams and they were mostly about food. The sense of smell, it was agreed, was much more acute while fasting. The pangs of hunger were not noticed after the third day.

How physical desires may change with long fasts was illustrated by one of the men who had occasionally enjoyed a cigarette. After about three days he did not want to smoke at all, and only after he began eating normally again did he have any desire to resume smoking.

for duty at Government expense. As pay and allowances commence from date of execution of oath of office, the oath and letter of acceptance should be forwarded immediately. After reporting for duty, a reasonable time will be allowed to obtain uniforms and equipment.

9. The commission will be probationary for a period of two years. During this period the probationary lieutenant will be required to complete a six months basic course of instruction in military subjects, after which he will become available for general detail: to duty at sea, at a home station, or on foreign duty. All commissioned officers, regular and probationary, serve under the same conditions as to pay, allowances, rank, command, and duty.

10. As soon after the completion of the probationary period as may be practicable, probationary second lieutenants of approximately the same length of service will be examined physically and mentally to determine their fitness for permanent commissions and for the purpose of fixing their relative positions on the lineal list.

11. No examination other than physical will be required of a graduate. A diploma will be accepted by the examining board in lieu of mental examination and reliance will be placed on the recommendation of the president of the college and the ranking professor of Military Science and Tactics as to moral qualification. In connection with the physical examination, it is suggested that the applicant submit himself to a thorough and rigid examination before filing an application.

12. Certificate of birth or other legal documentary evidence on this point will be presented to the board at the time of examination.

GERTRUDE ELY IS INTERVIEWED HERE

years. He told me I didn't have to know anything to vote. I was perfectly astonished. I went to a party convention and was no better satisfied; that is why I am working for man, and in respect for right, I must tell my friends the truth I know of him."

Because Miss Ely had spent so much time working with the soldiers overseas, the conversation naturally turned in that direction. "From the standpoint of patriotism," she declared, "the treatment of the ex-soldier is awful." The politicians have said, "You go ahead and lose your eyes and arms and legs and heads because we believe in international cooperation, but do you remember the party planks about the League of Nations after the war was over?"

"Patriotism does not mean going to war or urging others to, but loyalty to government. In a democracy like ours, we must have an educated majority. Think of the education in this country, and where has it all gone to? You may go into any town and ask people to meet or learn something about a man running for office. Nine out of ten will tell you that it is out of their line, or something equally foolish.

"The truth of the matter is that most men and women haven't the courage to say 'I can't vote for that League of Women Voters. It seems to me that it is the only political organization which is willing to supply facts instead of propaganda; which is willing to present both sides of the question.'"

Miss Ely has been working with the new voters section of the League for only a few months, and the work itself is less than two years old, but there are leagues now formed in seventy-one colleges in the United States.

New Zealand College Students Don't Indulge in "Dates and Pep Meetings"

New Zealand college life is practically the same as American, according to Catherine Landreth, who spoke on her native country before a group of Iowa State students recently, except that the students there do not indulge in "pep meetings" and "dates," and that they have more freedom of thought. She said they have no quarter system, and attendance is not compulsory, but the examinations are held outside of educational centers at the end of each academic year.

Miss Landreth went on to say that British began colonizing the island in 1840. At first they were opposed by Maorio, the Palynesian natives of New Zealand. These people were magnificent fighters, and treachery was unknown to them. Finally they were subdued, and in due time adopted western culture. The Maorio are a very intellectual people; they love music and poetry and do not take life seriously. Boat racing is a favorite sport with them.

New Zealand was the first country to adopt woman suffrage in 1893. There is no racial prejudice between the whites and natives; the Maori have equal rights and privileges. New Zealand has native government with the exception of the governor, who functions merely as a social head, while the prime minister has the real power.

Current world news by Athan Sterges was another number on the program. The rest of the evening was devoted to games.

The Cosmopolitan national costume dinner, which was to have been held in Wesley Hall, Feb. 20, has been indefinitely postponed. Arrangements are being made to have it as soon as possible and notice will be given later.

Ten Years Ago

Athletics at the University of Nebraska were in dire distress. The Athletic Board had to face the unusual condition of a deficit in the treasury at the end of the football season. It was either a case of abandoning athletics or of raising funds through some outside means.

The Varsity basketball team defeated the five representing the Kansas City Athletic Club by a score of 33 to 22. This was by far the fastest game ever seen on the Armory floor.

The attendance at the literary society was smaller than usual because of the Freshman Hop, senior party, and art exhibit.

Professor J. T. Lees gave an illustrated lecture at a convocation on the University of Athens. Many interesting and different features of Athenian architecture were brought out and emphasized more than ever before.

The Pan-Hellenic board called to the attention of the university organizations the rule against taking hired conveyances to formal parties with a warning that the penalty for the infringement of the rule was no party for four months.
