Much Work In Cataloging Book
ors, and a card for the shelf list. These cards must be filed according to their listings.
The book goes, then, to a shop where the call number is gilded on the back of the book. This process is a very exact and expensive one. The brass type is heated and then is pressed into the binding. The book is now ready for the shelf of the Library and for the students' use.

This is the process that a book goes through before it reaches the shelf of the Library. The cost of this, in addition to the purchase price, is about $1.50. And since 8,000 books are added to the Library's collection every year, it will possess 200,000 books by July.
It is the purpose of the Library to supply books and information to the faculty and students. Many persons have been aided in securing out-of-print books. Valuable desired books are discovered through watching carefully the second-hand book catalogs and magazines. This is done by G. H. Doane, Librarian.

Chimpanzee Is Stronger Than Man athletes' by between three and four-fifths and four and three-quarters to one.

Although man is greatly inferior to the apes in muscular power he appears to hold his own very well as compared with other animals. Professor Bauman states: "Taking a comparative view we find that, making the necessary allowances for difference in stature and amount of cross section of muscle in proportion to body weight man compares favorably with many, probably with most other animals. We rank considerably above the hoofed animals, and the oft-cited strength of the beetle and ant, when duly corrected as just indicated, appear to be materially less than our own."

New Flat Crepes
In the new frosted pastel tones sponsored by PARIS. Shades so entrancing no wonder the fashion creators have chosen crepes for the dresses this spring.

We present these new shades in flat crepes of lustrous and lasting quality. A Pure Dye too, whose charm will give you lengthened enjoyment.

Smart femininity has set its approval upon these lovely shades—the delicate rose tints, the soft grays, the dainty greens and frosty blues. Blues as soft as Riviera seas—pinks mellowed by the artist's touch of gray—greens with a whisper of yellow in it—subtle reds like the murmuring of a gathering storm. New colors that you'll like. Many to select from—all correct—and fashionable.

AUTHORITY AND ITS USE
(Ohio State Lantern)

The Interfraternity Council has passed its bi-annual resolution to revise its constitution. The Interfraternity Council clamors for a constitution which will give it authority to deal with fraternity matters and its only logical to believe that if such a body of fraternity men draws up a constitution which will give them the authority, and presents this constitution to the Council of Administration, the authority will be granted to them.

But if the Interfraternity Council as it now looks upon itself draws up a new constitution giving it more power and presents this constitution to the Council of Administration for approval, we trust the University will deny it the power which it has proven it knows not how to use.

Men More Extravagant
Men of the University of Montana spend an average of $643.52 a year while the girls spend only $625.02.

One-Third of Pupils Below Average
Professors of Ohio university maintain that one third of the students of that institution are incapable of doing the required work.

Last fall the Interfraternity Council asked for a revision of the rushing rules. A new rushing system was duly presented. The council as a body did not consider the new system. The members passed the buck to their respective chapters, where, after consideration by underclassmen (where consideration was accorded at all) without the benefit of mature discussion and deliberation, the system was tossed out. Consequently, when the question was presented on the floor of the council, discussion was dispensed with, the delegates were "instructed" and the system was voted down almost unanimously.

Now we have no quarrel with the Interfraternity council for rejecting the rushing system; it had its merits and it had its defects. But the question was surely of enough moment to merit deliberation by the body of representative seniors that compose the Interfraternity Council. We have no quarrel with the council for rejecting the rushing system, but we believe that the Interfraternity Council therein clearly demonstrates its inherent weakness.

The weakness of the council is, and always has been, in the interpretation which the council places upon the source of its own authority. The present council considers itself a body of official delegates from the various fraternities. Action, in matters of consequence, taken by the council is action taken by the fraternities speaking through their delegates. The members derive their authority from their respective chapters and are answerable to their chapters. And this group desires a constitution which will give it more power. We do not believe that such a group is responsible enough to merit any measure of power.

We cannot subscribe to this view of the authority of the Interfraternity Council. We believe that the authority of the Interfraternity Council is derived from the University, which delegates a certain portion of its power to deal with fraternity affairs to a body of representative senative fraternity men and of which body the presidents of the various fraternities are ex-officio the members. And we believe that the Interfraternity Council is answerable not to the fraternities the presidents of which compose the memberships, but to the University whence it derives its authority. It is only logical that such a body be granted authority to deal with fraternity affairs and its only logical to believe that if such a body of fraternity men draws up a constitution which will give them the authority, and presents this constitution to the Council of Administration, the authority will be granted to them.

Paris is making these frocks in dyed lace and in crepe Roma with the godets of lace dyed to match the dress. The printed Georgettes and chiffons mingling fantastic flowers of Winter rose, violet, jade green and citron yellow are quite lovely for godet frocks.
