Division Into Twenty-one Classes; Trophies Awarded to Winners in Each Group

Nebraska—home of great basketball tournaments—is ready for the greatest tournament in its history, the three day affair which starts Thursday of next week.

With 332 teams registered last night—eighty-six more teams than entered in 1924—this is the biggest tournament ever held in Lincoln.

Eleven playing floors will be utilized for the tournament; three in the Field House, two in the Armory, the Y. M. C. A. floor, two in Whittier Junior High, two in the Lincoln High School, and one in Bancroft Junior High.

The University of Nebraska will play a leading role in the entertainment of the visitors.

The tournament entry list closed Monday, but entries mailed on that date are still being received.

CARS AND EDUCATION

About a year ago cars were banned from the campus at Princeton University.

The move appears to have been more or less successful, and now the school authorities go one step farther and ask parents not to allow students to own cars while at school.

Several years ago a similar move was attempted at the University, but with little success.

About half of the student body seems to succeed fairly well in getting an education, in spite of the fact that it walks to and from all classes.

Neither has it ever been satisfactorily explained just why farmers with dry-weather wheat crops and mortgaged farms, should be forced to pay taxes to support an institution where students float leisurely to and from classes in Hudsons and Cadillacs, or whiz two whole blocks to and from school in a Ford.

But then, there are a few ponderous problems which one simply can not solve, so we give up.

Du Teau Addresses Forum Luncheon

No Building For Students

"The Temple was built for student life but for years has harbored classes. There is no building on the campus to bring students together.

"Associations here between men are almost nil. Rarely does one see a group of ten or a dozen men in fellowship. Such contact is limited to the fraternities each within itself.

"The Law College is the only group on the campus whose students possess community of interests and who mix and intermingle.

"Our mixers are a farce. They resolve into cliques and groups as does everything else. There is no mixing.

Social Expenses Great

"The expenses of our social system have become too great. We have allowed in a few short years the Rent-A-Ford to become a pillar of our social life.

"Corsages are a nice way of saying it with flowers. But they are signs of distinctly formal affairs. The men do not dress in full dress suits.

he says it with anything but flowers. "The student body lacks community of interest. We are isolating ourselves from each other. We have allowed expenses to become too great.

"Is a Nebraska man a Nebraska man first and something else afterwards or something else first and a Nebraska man afterwards?"

Social Advantages To All

"No fraternity or sorority men or girls would say that they felt superior to the group known as bars. But we are constantly drawing the net closer that is eliminating the barb from social life.

"We want to get the individuality of people in a group, not the individuality of people in twosomes and foursomes. Some men of the city have said that one thing that is lacking at the University is that the students are not well acquainted with each other.

"Do we want to leave this University without feeling we belong to it? Are we to let the Law College be the only group with community of interest? Are we not to embody this spirit in all the other colleges of the campus?"

Students Should Grow With School

"Are we to leave the University with the feeling that we spent four or five years here or are we to leave it imbued with the feeling for a great Nebraska spirit, with a feeling that it has developed and brought our personalities?"

"We want a better and finer campus life. We haven't the things now that will give it. We must face the evils of our social system. The University is growing. The students must grow with it.

"The opportunity to do something for our social life is knocking at our door. If we respond, we may alleviate the evils now present. If progress continues, the University of Nebraska will remain not only a vital part of our youth but of our personality."

Discuss Need of Men's Building

A more than average crowd was present at the meeting yesterday. A lively discussion followed the address centering around the need for a Union building for men's social activity on the campus and the new denominational houses. It was advocated that funds going toward the denominational houses be combined to go toward a University building which would meet student needs. Student pastors presented their side of the argument saying that they were designed to be pastors' homes and to meet the personal rather than the social needs of the students.
