School of Journalism to Show Reels Telling Story of Production Of Chicago Tribune

(University News Service)
"From Trees to Tribunes," a three reel motion picture depicting the production of a modern newspaper from the manufacture of the paper in Canada to the final pink sheet sports extra, will be shown Wednesday evening, April 28, at 7:30, in Social Science auditorium of the University, under the auspices of the School of Journalism. Members of the School and Lincoln newspaper men are especially invited and the public is welcome.

The picture was received enthusiastically in early runs near Chicago, and has only recently been put into circulation again after being withdrawn for revision. The film tells the whole story of the making and publishing of the Chicago Tribune, and gives a representative picture of the process of publishing a modern daily paper. Some fine examples of photography with beautiful scenes of Canadian north woods are included. Close-ups of interesting famous personalities are also shown. The time of projection will be less than an hour.

OPEN FINE ARTS EXHIBIT FRIDAY

The Rev. Frances Russell Will Speak At Reception; About a Hundred Pictures On Display

The annual exhibition of the Nebraska Art Association and School of Fine Arts will be opened Friday evening at a reception at the University Art Gallery.

About a hundred pictures including those of some of our best artists will be on display. Some of the paintings are from the Chicago Art Institute, and others, by New Mexico artists, from Santa Fe.

The Reverend Francis Russell will speak, and students of the School of Fine Arts, will give a program of readings and musical numbers.

Article by Lackey Appears in Journal

(University News Service.)
One of the leading articles in the April issue of the Journal of Geography, just out, is "The Selection of Geographical Material for the Junior High School," by Professor E. E. Lackey of the department of geography. The author discusses the particular function which geography fills in the general objective of junior high school education, and gives criteria for the proper selection of geographical material to meet the aims he outlines.

Paleontology Class Makes Field Studies

(University News Service.)
For actual field experience in determining geological strata, the advanced paleontology class of Prof. Ed. McEwan went to Bennet, Wednesday, April 21, to collect fossils and identify the age of the fossil beds. The class applied in actual field exploration work, the lessons it has been taught in class and laboratory during the year. More trips are being planned.

Sends Article To Review (University News Service)
Prof. N. A. Bengston of the department of geography has forwarded the final manuscripts on "The Physiography of Honduras" to the Geographical Review for publication in an early issue.

LEROSSIGNOL WILL ATTEND CONVENTION

Goes East To Attend Meeting of Association of Collegiate Schools Of Business

(University News Service)
Dean J. E. LeRossignol of the College of business administration, left yesterday for Hanover, New Hampshire, where he will attend the annual convention of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, April 29, 30, and May 1. Dean LeRossignol is president of the association, and the program for the convention has been prepared under his supervision. Problems to be considered in the opening day's discussions will be: 1. Personnel work in the college. 2. Relation of the college of business to the arts college. 3. How to train and find teachers. 4. Business ethics. The discussion will be opened by Prof. H. R. Wellman of Dartmouth College. A paper on the "Essentials of a collegiate course in business" will be read Friday by Prof. L. C. Marshall of the University of Chicago. A complimentary dinner to the association will be given the same day by Dartmouth College, and an address will be made by President E. M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College. A discussion will follow on university training for business in foreign countries with talks by professors from Canada, Latin-America, and Czechoslovakia. Election of officers will be held Saturday, May 1. Two papers will be presented on the last day: one on "Placement of college graduates in business," by Prof. Paul F. Brissenden of Columbia University, and the other on "What constitutes graduate work in business administration?" by Prof. A. Wellington Raylor of New York University.

Casady Gives Talk At P. B. K. Banquet

of course, the biological. A man is, at the outset, meant to be a home-keeper. The tendency of college graduates to avoid marriage in order to achieve a "career" is disastrous. The sea of celibacy is strewn with wreckage. And in other aspects as well—in the intellectual, economic, civic, playful, social, religious—a man's life must come full circle, else he fails of that for which he is set on earth.

Prof. O. Stepanek spoke a few words of welcome to the new members of Phi Beta Kappa, saying "A Japanese student at Vassar defined Vassar to her friends in Tokio as an athletic institution with certain intellectual opportunities open to the feeble-bodied; and if the promises of the vocational schools, backed by the high fees of the specialist, continue to draw from the liberal arts an increasing proportion of the students of surpassing intellectual endowment, our college of arts and sciences will eventually be defined as an almshouse with certain advantages of Starr Gives Response

In his response, Joe R. Starr, ranking member of the senior class, told briefly of his dissatisfaction with his college course. The editorial column of this issue of The Daily Nebraskan contains several paragraphs taken from his address.

Prof. Reynoldson gave an entertaining and informing talk on her experiences at a Phi Beta Kappa banquet in London last year. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gray of the University School of Music gave several cello and vocal numbers. Prof. Laurence Fossler conducted the initiation of the forty-five new members. Yet melancholy as the prospect seems, members of Phi Beta Kappa will still be able to sit down together like a band of brothers and use the English language for purposes of speech, without an interpreter hard by to define their terms, for they shall still escape the jargon of the specialist with his complexes and neuroses, his bacteriophages and his endocrines, his infra-reds and ultraviolet, his hormones and enzymes, his orthophones and his heterodynes."

W. A. A. Members Are Hostesses at Meeting

A. C. A. C. W." Laura Whelpley treated the technique of organization, and Eleanor Flatermensch described the point system, and the problem of financing the organization. After each of these talks there were round table discussions, at which each woman expressed her views.

At twelve-thirty the delegates, and members of the local organization, met at Le Petit Gourmet and luncheon served. The afternoon meeting started at one-thirty. Mildred Wohlford spoke of the eligibility of teams and Miss Lee concluded the talks with some ideas concerning inter-school competition in women's sports. She stressed the idea that women's sports should be played in the school itself and that the teams should not go outside the schools and play competitive teams. There was a very interesting discussion following the afternoon meeting.

It may not be more than a year before there are several national chapters in Nebraska, and a state conference possible, made up of the members of the national organization.
