The tournament is progressing rather slowly, as many of the games have to be postponed. Not all of the first round games have been completed yet, although according to the schedule, the second set should be finished by tonight.

ENGINEERS ARE READY FOR WEEK

Plans For Annual Celebration And Open House are Progressing

PARADE WILL BE MAY 5

Plans for Engineers' Week, May 3 to 8, are almost completed. Work on the fifteen-ton highway bridge, being erected north of Administration building, is progressing rapidly. A number of students were assisting with the work yesterday.

Ted Johnson, who is in charge of window displays reports that final arrangements have been made and that the displays will be put in place early Monday morning, May 3. Each department including the Agricultural and Geology department will be represented.

O. J. Ferguson, dean of the College of Engineering, will deliver a fifteen-minute talk over radio station KFAB at 10:30 this morning, in which he will describe the main features of Engineers' Week and especially Engineers' Night. Within the next few days announcements will be made from stations KOIL and WOAW located in Council Bluffs and Omaha. This is being done in order that people throughout the state may avail themselves of the coming opportunity to visit the Engineering college of this university.

Parade To Be Representative

The annual Engineers' Parade will pass down O street at noon Wednesday, May 5. Each department is entering a float that will in some way represent the type and class of work done by it. The University band will be an addition to this year's parade. Don Hannon, chairman of the parade committee, reports that work has already been started on several of the floats.

Programs which will be distributed to the public as a guide book on Engineers' Night have already gone to press. All the events such as pouring iron in the foundry, welding thermite in the chemistry building, and testing insulators in the electrical laboratory, will be listed with directions and instructions as to how to find any of the engineering buildings on the campus. Over seven thousand programs were distributed at Engineers' Night last year.

Blue print posters and signs will be placed in conspicuous places about the campus today announcing the program for Engineers' Week. Special posters have been designed by students taking architectural engineering to be used as part of the downtown window displays.
