We find upon reflection that we have not said anything about the main topic of conversation at the present time—football. Everybody is talking and thinking about it and here we have been trying to interest students in the student council, the need for traffic lights, proper treatment of freshmen and the like.

But what can one say about football now? We can tell of the spirit of expectation that seems to electrify the campus, we can discuss the schedule, tell of the hard work of the coaches and the squad, commend the "wonderful spirit of the reserves" and so on, but everyone knows all that.

It seems to be the popular thing for editorial writers to lament the fact that football has taken such a hold on the public, that the college world is becoming crazed with football, and that the main ambition of most colleges seems to be to turn out a winning football team.

But we can't seem to get excited over the situation. We realize that some of us get highly excited at a football game, that we often act very undignified, that we spend a great deal of time before and after the games in discussion of the games, but we somehow fail to see the danger.

We confess to an unexpressed feeling that goes up and down our spine when "that big red team comes on the field." We find it impossible to remain in our seats when the whistle blows and the ball soars in the opening kickoff. When we leave the game we are as tired as if we had actually played in the game ourselves. But wherein lies the danger?

These things to which we freely confess seem to be the symptoms of the "football craze," that terrible disease which threatens to "robble up" our modern universities, but we have always managed to get through the season with no dire results despite a defeat or two. And the University seems to get along just about the same during football season as after or before it.

So let the "Intelligentsia" howl at us or laugh at us as the case may be; we will go right on enjoying football, talking football, perhaps even unconsciously worshipping it. The time may come when we will have to admit that these "calamity howlers" were right, but in the meantime we will be getting a "big kick" out of football.

We notice that the fall elections are going to be held soon and look forward to a day of real pleasure. There probably have not been more than two or three names filed for positions yet. About Friday morning there will be a big rush for the Student Activities office and out of the rush will come two candidates for each office, excepting Honorary Colonel, of course.

Just about now "political bosses" are getting their heads together and picking their candidates. Perhaps they are already picked. If not, they soon will be. At any rate there is always that mysterious number "two."

Non-fraternity men hardly ever file any more. There isn't any use; they have no organization and no chance of being elected. The women seldom try to compete with the fraternity factions. There are a few offices to be filled by women, the main one being that of Honorary Colonel, and they are usually content with running for those offices.

Some day the non-fraternity men and possibly women are going to get organized and then the fun will start. But at the present time it is just a fight between two fraternity factions. These factions are very evenly divided, but no one seems to know why the division is as it is. There are no reasons, no reasons why one fraternity should vote one way any more than the other, except that it has been done that way for years. Each faction seems to be organized to beat the other faction.

The peculiar thing about these factions is that they are not supposed to exist. The administration does not recognize them, in fact we understand that there is some harsh penalty for such swapping of votes as is done by the factions. So the meetings and all transactions are conducted secretly and to the poor innocent public, the best man wins.

ACTIVITY MADNESS

(Syracuse Daily Orange.)

Activity Madness, the Campus demon, will soon be shaking off his summer lethargy and beginning to take his annual toll among the members of the entering class. This week offers a sudden but welcome release from the pressure of continually "doing something," but with the imminent reorganization of all Campus associations the new-found leisure is already doomed.

Members of the entire four classes are acceptable prey to the demon but toward freshmen he bears particular malice and the havoc he wreaks invariably assumes serious and alarming proportions. Charmed with the prospect of a "college career," prodded by energetic sisters and brothers, with an eye to the reputation of the house, into an organization in which they have little or no personal interest, it is not many days before freshmen are victims of Activity Madness—and an interminable nightmare of meetings, practices and sessions begins.

Blame for the condition is difficult to place. Personal ambition, genuine interest, competitive spirit, the primitive desire for honor and fame expressed in terms of Campus publicity—all share in the contributing causes. The Chapter is not wholly at fault either. Some students need the encouragement of group backing in order to help them realize their potentialities; still others need group restraint to prevent the over indulgence of selfish aspirations.

A common sense point of view, with a recognition of the relative value of activities to other college interests, will do more toward the suppression of Activity Madness than any other factor. With the delights of becoming attached to an organization as attractively printed as they are sure to be—and the added incentive to please the Chapter which has honored them with pledgeship, it is not to be wondered that the hard work which extra-curricular activity necessitates—and the unappreciative attitude too often adopted by the fraternity—is entirely overlooked and the eager freshman goes his way, wilfully blind to the danger of Activity Madness.

Council Tries For Lower Music Rates

Managers indicated encouragement when he made the statement to the effect that student support determined the popularity of local orchestras and that the prices of the orchestras had only risen on the strength of that popularity.

Several sororities and fraternities have already expressed their desire to assist the Council in their action. The Council feels confident that results will be obtained but is insistent in its desire for the cooperation of every campus social organization.

Fordyce To Lecture To Classes Thursday

The four divisions of Education 63, Educational Psychology, will have a joint meeting five o'clock Thursday in Temple auditorium. Dr. Fordyce, of the psychology department of Teachers College, will lecture to the students. His subject will be an explanation of the structure and processes of the mechanisms of psychological behavior.

The students registered in this course are not compelled to attend but are strongly advised to do so. Dr. Fordyce's talk will clear up difficulties and lead to a better understanding of the subject matter.

You can bat out lots of good stuff with a Remington Portable Typewriter

IT is surprising how the Remington Portable helps with college work. Long reports, theses, and transcriptions of lectures simply roll out of this machine. You don't have to be an experienced operator to speed up your writing to an unbelievable degree.

Your theses and reports look better, too, and quite naturally create a more favorable impression on the professors when they are written on the Remington Portable.

Weights only 8½ pounds, net, and is the handiest, fastest, simplest to operate, and most dependable of all portables. Smallest, lightest and most compact standard keyboard portable.
