AN OPEN LETTER TO THE UNIVERSITY Y. M. C. A. AND Y. W. C. A.

Within a week your annual campaign for funds will start and you will ask the students of the University to contribute.

We invite you to make a statement to The Daily Nebraskan telling what your organizations do accomplish during the year and telling in brief where the money goes that is contributed by the students.

Because of this doubt which seems to be in the minds of many of the students, we feel that it would be beneficial not only to yourselves but to our readers if you see fit to make such a statement.

With this brief invitation to use the columns of The Daily Nebraskan for the purpose above stated, we leave the matter entirely in your hands and will push it no further.

THE EDITOR, THE DAILY NEBRASKAN

LANGUAGES

The prevailing attitude of college and high school students in the United States is to avoid the study of other languages as much as possible.

In most of the cases of students who are unable to master the English language in all its details it is found that they are also unable to learn any other language.

As the English tongue is closely related to the old Latin, so is French, Spanish, Italian, and German.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT

Last semester considerable light was thrown upon the class elections; in fact, the criticism of the elections became so strong that one class refrained from holding any at all.

It was natural, therefore, that we should be very much interested Tuesday when it was announced that a meeting of the junior class would be held in which officers would be elected.

We found, to our intense surprise, a total of twenty-one persons attending the meeting, including the president.

So we are pleased to report that great improvement has been shown this year in the attendance at class meetings.

Another thing—while we were in attendance as a silent observer, the president said, "Now the next thing we want to discuss is a Junior-Senior Prom."

SHADES OF KING ARTHUR

The open season for sponsors is in. We are now to have sponsors for the regiment chosen not only in the spring but also in the fall.

lacking in chivalry—but surely this attitude is conclusive proof to the contrary.

We we—the soulless materialists of today—we out-chival chivalry. Are our officers content with choosing one maiden to cheer him on?

As we were saying, the sponsors are to be chosen soon. The only suggestion that we might offer is that, since we have the spirit, let us have the picturesqueness, too.

College Press REAL CONTRIBUTIONS (Daily Illini)

There is no end to the number of cracks the "average college instructor" directs against the "government."

Which generalizations make it fit to call the attention of the University faculty people who criticize the conduct of the government with considerable regularity to the case of Dr. James M. Hyde, professor of metallurgy in the University of Southern California.

Not only did Prof. Hyde wish to run for the nomination for United States Senator from California on the Republican ticket, but also he was given a leave of absence by the university for the remainder of the year to carry on his campaign.

On coming out for office, he announced that he would devote his time to a campaign against political protection of crime through the misuse of senatorial patronage.

COLLEGIATE STYLES (Ohio State Lantern)

At one time Paris was the birthplace of all fashions. Perhaps even now the French capital has considerable to say about clothes or the lack of them and how they should be worn.

Colleges and universities gradually are usurping this style dictating power and this without their efforts or consent.

All of which is very amusing because a very small percentage of college students actually wear these sartorial creations.

Other college styles, or more properly idiosyncracies, have not been so popular with the clothing dealers.

If college students actually had

To say that the colleges of the country create the styles is to make a misstatement. The leading clothing manufacturers create the styles and then set about to create the impression that they emanate from the colleges and universities.

That, dear little boys and girls, is the reason clothes are advertised as "collegiate" these days.

Inventors Use Power of Idea "Now it is a fair question to ask what power did these inventors use, of whom Emerson speaks? None, we may say, except the power of an idea, and this power of an idea, it pleases us to call vital scholarship."

How to Start the Year Write

"Lou" (or "Lucy"), said the venerable Dean to the very young person beside his desk, "the very best start you can make in college is to get yourself a fine new fountain pen. Nothing like it for lecture notes, required readings, memoranda. Provided it's dependable. Now this one, I myself have used for a college generation!"
