WELCOME BACK

Nebraska alumni, we welcome you! Homecoming Day is one of the bright spots of the fall term of school, just as the annual Round-up enlivens the spring of the year. It is the day when the undergraduate body of the University takes the place of the host and unites in entertaining the Cornhuskers of past years. It is a day when old memories are revived in the minds of the alumni and new impressions formed in the minds of the undergraduate. For the graduate it is a renewing of the old bonds of Nebraska, for the student it is a time of strengthening the bonds that are steadily binding him to the old school.

Alumnus, you will find many changes in the campus of the University. No longer are the steps of the Armory the general meeting-place for the men of the institution, the building has been taken over entirely by the co-eds. In the place of the old Armory for the men stands the magnificent new Coliseum, a structure of which any Nebraska man can well be proud. The building is rapidly assuming a place of importance in the affairs of the student body and the city of Lincoln and its vast size has put meetings and rallies on a much larger and more enthusiastic scale than was possible before.

Returning from the Coliseum we find the building to be known as Morrill Hall advancing towards a state of completion. Much of the congestion that has been present in the University Library will be removed when this building is completed. But, Alumnus, do not let these changes make you feel that the school has changed, that you are in the wrong place. The same spirit of loyalty to the University and its traditions that has placed it in its eminent position in the Middle-west is still in existence and as strong as ever. The University is still "Dear Old Nebraska U." to all of us. The same spirit that put Cornhusker football at the head of the Valley is still burning in the breasts of the undergraduate body and it is that spirit that bids you all a hearty welcome to the campus!

THE COLISEUM

The first real test of the acoustic qualities of the new University Coliseum came last week-end when both the State Teachers convention and the U. S. Navy Band recital were held there Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Since that time several architects and Lincoln musicians have declared the structure nearly perfect for both speaking and musical occasions.

For the Navy Band recital last Saturday evening, no amplifiers were needed to carry the powerful music to all parts of the structure. But although the sound waves carried the length of the auditorium, no echoes were audible. Very few concerts of this kind will probably be held in the Coliseum, however, and amplifiers are necessary for the average occasion, either for speaking or for music with a lighter volume. One particular soloist who appeared during the teachers convention sang through the temporary amplifier system with such success that it came to the far end of the large hall as clear as a bell. Her voice is not one which carries extremely well, so the amplifier system has also been proved a success in the new structure.

The University is fortunate to have a building which can be used to such advantage for large and small occasions alike. Architects can plan and try to make buildings nearly perfect, but often times they fail, and the only test of acoustic conditions is to actually try the building out. Every possible advantage has been given the new Coliseum by the use of Insulite on the ceiling. This is a porous, woody material which helps to absorb the sound waves enough to prevent an echo. The large steel arches across the hall also help to break up the sound waves and eliminate the echo. Only one thing remains to be done, and the Board of Regents has taken action to do it in the spring. It is the installation of a permanent amplifier set, similar to the one used now, but with stronger reproducing qualities. It is a half-way device between the loud amplifier set used for outside occasions, and the present one in the Coliseum, which is not quite large enough. When this set is installed in the spring, the Coliseum will have acoustic qualities which will be nearly ideal for either small or large occasions.

Eastern Football

For the second time this season, there is a simmering of something brewing in Eastern gridiron relationships which fails to carry the savory odors which accompany honest to goodness he-sportsmanship in American football. First it was the Army and Syracuse, failing to get along. Now Harvard and Princeton, supposedly the leaders of football, are bringing shame on the game.

In the Army-Syracuse contest (more nearly correct would be to call it a battle) two players, the best of each team, were carried from the field of action and the chances are strong that they will not be able to play again this season. To top it all off, a Syracuse player took it upon himself to tell the officials how to govern such games, and impressed his remarks with his fist.

In exhibit number 2, Harvard took the initiative before the contest, spreading unclean remarks through the comic publication, the Lampoon. One cartoon in particular which was an illustration of two hogs carried a caption which read something like this:

"Come Brothers, Let's Root For Dear Old Princeton."

Unfortunately for Harvard, but fortunately otherwise, Princeton won the game and the Princeton rooters "ganged" a hand full of police to tear down the goal posts and break them into bits. Now the two schools break off relations. This destruction of goal posts is getting to be a habit among some of the eastern teams as a matter of fact. An evil habit, which reminds us of the dear high school days when folks did that sort of thing, be-very young and unthoughtful.

All of these things go on in the east and still the supposedly elite of the football world and of the educational world of America, as they have elected to call themselves; do such unspeakable things which western and middle western universities would never think of stooping to.

It was the east who first waved the flag of dismay last fall against Nebraska when Notre Dame took offense at a few thoughtless words. It was the east who carried the break of Notre Dame with Nebraska as an unspeakable blot on intercollegiate football.

Now, with the present charges on the books, it looks as though the east should make a bow before the intercollegiate world and beg pardon for forgetting that kiddish pranks and narrow provincialism, more broadly speaking, narrow mindedness, have no place in college athletics.

Coach on Prohibition
"Lincoln said this nation could not endure half slave and half free. Neither can it continue half dry and half wet. If Prohibition is to stay in force, much as some may disagree with it, the law must be observed. To date, official Washington shows any modification. If Prohibition is but a negligible minority in favor of to be enforced, I seriously believe athletics, and particularly football,
