Weather Predicted Far Into Future

tions as to what the weather next year will be like."

Radio broadcasting of weather forecasts is, in Professor Blair's opinion, by far the most effective means by which the predictions may be given wide and valuable distribution. In the past, he explained, it was necessary to telegraph the report to surrounding cities, and then to depend on the newspapers and the telephone to carry the report to persons vitally concerned with changes in temperature and in weather.

Blair Alone Broadcasts Personally

Professor Blair is said to be the only United States weather bureau official in the country who personally goes before the microphone each day to give his weather forecast over the radio. Each morning at 9:30 o'clock, he delivers his forecast to an unseen audience, at the same time giving a short summary of weather conditions in various parts of the country as they have been reported to his office.

Professor Blair has been in the service of the United States weather bureau since his graduation from Leland Stanford University, nineteen years ago. Before coming to Lincoln in 1924, he served in California, Colorado, Minnesota, Iowa, Utah, and Hawaii. He has six assistants in the Lincoln office, all of whom are kept busy making the detailed observations and preparing the reports.

Five Heads of Eastern Women's Colleges Encourage Scholarship

New York, Jan. 17.—Young women who wish to tread the primrose path of social entertainment at the expense of intellectual activities, are frowned on at some of the leading women's colleges of the East.

Responding to a query, the heads of five institutions said that while social activities properly have a place in the life of their students, the official attitude is that intellectual pursuits should constitute the main purpose of the student bodies.

Social Life Sound

In general, the heads of women's colleges agree with President William Allan Neilson, of Smith College. He recently told the students that Smith College was not going to be turned into "a center of engaging social life with a few duties to give a kind of relish to a perpetual holiday" and asserted he was going to insist that the "intellectual life here shall be the main life, even if we have to dispense with a large number of admirable and effective persons."

The response of President Marion Edwards Park, of Bryn Mawr, was in the form of an excerpt from her opening address to the students when she said, "That Bryn Mawr believes fully in the importance of out-of-the-classroom hours is shown by its insistence on residence away from the world." The college, she explained, "regards itself first of all a place for instruction and the life here must bear the right relation to such a di-

Oklahoma's Finest Will Be Chosen in "Big Man" Contest

Norman, Okla., Jan. 17.—A veritable whirlwind of nominations descended on the Anniversary Sooner staff following the announcement Sunday of the "Big Man" contest in which "Oklahoma's Finest" will be selected for the 1927 issue of the Oklahoma yearbook.

"To promote a proper appreciation of masculine pulchritude, to encourage the eds of Oklahoma striving toward this end, we have initiated the first campaign to elect 'Oklahoma's Finest,'" Jack Dow, editor of the Sooner, said.

Competition for the position of Oklahoma's Beau Brummel promises to be keen, according to Dow, and the editor anticipates a record entry for the coveted honor.

Co-eds generally have begun to evince interest in the campaign, and it is expected that a number of "favorite sons" will be entered by female admirers of male pulchritude.

Besides having his picture, covering one full page, in the Sooner, the winner of the contest is to receive free transportation to Oklahoma City

McCormell and Pound Are Quoted

Appearing in a recent issue of The New Student are quotations from two prominent men, both of whom are widely known at the University of Nebraska—Dean Roscoe Pound and Bishop Francis McCormell.

The one-year varsity rule of college football was urged by Ernest H. Wilkins, former dean of the liberal arts college, Chicago University. This proposal, known as the Fauver plan, restricts the student to one year of varsity football during his college course. Many benefits, it was declared, would result from this plan: it would decrease the notoriety of individual football stars, and thereby decrease the overemphasis on football; it would increase the number of men receiving the benefits of Varsity experience; it would make it possible for students to act as coaches in the senior year, thus making football more of a student affair, and giving valuable training in leadership; it would make it unprofitable to hire athletes; it would increase the emphasis on intra-mural sports, and improve their quality; and it would give each man an opportunity to become proficient in other sports which would perhaps be of more use to him in later life than football.

Bishop Francis McCormell believes that college men cannot be very effective in humanizing industry by working shoulder to shoulder with workmen. Instead, he suggests that more can be accomplished by the technician who applies a trained mind to the humanizing of his particular profession.

There is a tendency in this direction, Bishop McCormell believes. Engineers once looked upon their profession solely as a means of getting on. But now there is a growing feeling of responsibility to society. The report of Mr. Hoover's committee on waste several years ago fearlessly assigned the greatest responsibility to the management rather than to labor. Another instance is the conception of law as an instrument of social progress which is taught by Dean Pound in the Harvard Law School.

Women Outnumber Men on Ag Campus

The resident student registration for the College of Agriculture is nearly completed. The figures at this time show that the women will again outnumber the men.

The statistics from the Dean's office show that 183 men and 215 women had re-registered. These figures are not complete as a few are unusually late in the re-registration.

Bids Open at Kansas for Addition To Stadium with 36,000 Capacity

Lawrence, Kan., Jan. 17.—Bids are to be opened Wednesday, Jan. 19, for the construction of the remaining unit of the memorial stadium at the University of Kansas. This last unit will be semi-circular in form, connecting the two present units, and giving, when completed, a horseshoe that will seat 36,000 persons.

Construction is expected to begin shortly after the letting of the contract, and it is expected the completed stadium will be ready for the Kansas-Missouri game Oct. 8, 1927. At any rate, it will be finished before the Kansas-Missouri game the Saturday before Thanksgiving, when the full capacity of 36,000 will be needed. In fact, Dr. F. C. Allen, director of athletics, is planning to construct temporary bleacher seats at the open end of the horseshoe so as to be able to care for 40,000 persons for the Missouri game.

The addition will cost about $175,000, bringing the total cost of the stadium to about half a million dollars. The first units, costing $238,000, were erected from funds contributed by friends of the University for the Stadium-Union memorial fund. Two years ago, $80,000 was borrowed to extend the units to the completed end units. Payments of these bonds by the athletic association have been twice as rapid as the contract required. The balance of these bonds and the cost of the last section of the stadium will require —and so the country was saved

You know that old one about Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth:

There was a puddle in the road, and the Queen hesitated, and then Walter stepped up and threw his embroidered topcoat across the puddle—and so the country was saved, likewise the Queen's pumps. And the Queen was so grateful to Walter that she made him Sir Walter, instead of just plain Walt as his friends had known him before.

That's the fastest example on record of clothes making the man.

Naturally, now that the girls wear galoshes and paved streets are in vogue, a fellow hasn't much chance to do the Raleigh act. Nevertheless, there's nothing much more important in making the man today than the right kind of clothes. College men know that. They come to us for college clothes by Society Brand because these clothes—while they lack Sir Walter's embroidery—are considerably better looking. Really distinctive! As one precocious Freshman, a student of the American language, remarked: "They'd make a hit with any queen."
