IT'S DIFFERENT NOW

The most impossible thing for an editorial writer to do is to stir action on any program he is advocating in his columns.

In the intervening years education has become so common a thing even in its highest reaches, that the preacher, the editor, and the teacher no longer hold the relatively commanding positions of learning and leadership they once so proudly held.

"Police protection needed" is our first thought in viewing the titles of theater offerings this week in Lincoln theaters.

THE WINDUP

This is the time of year when instructors make all possible haste to assign extra reading and more term papers to prove to everybody and students in the courses in particular that they are not guilty of dispensing "pipe" credit hours.

The remedy of course is a better-scheduled array of assignments on the part of the instructors, and even more a better-scheduled system of study by the students.

For the information of freshman co-eds who are still in search of romance and lots of excitement, the first circus of the year is scheduled for next week.

THE SWING OF THE PENDULUM

A recent article in Harper's magazine recites political movements of the last century or so to prove that they all follow in general the movement back and forth of a swinging pendulum.

Perhaps the same comparison might be made of so-called school spirit, especially in its athletic and "bonfire" manifestations. Several years ago Nebraska was at a peak of "spirit" and "honest-to-God-old-Nebraska guts" on the athletic fields.

Perhaps in a few years the good old "spirit" will again be flowing warm and quick, and bonfire-building will again come back into its own.

Take it from an Omahan, this new Red Gas has it all over Dago Red for power in climbing hills. That's all it's good for though.

VARSITY PARTIES

The fight between the Student Council and the Varsity Dance committee for control of the Varsity dance program next year is hanging fire in faculty committee on student organizations.

In settling the question one way or the other the committee should no doubt bear in mind the old adage "divide and rule."

A good night's sleep is often a good cure for general dissatisfaction.

No sooner did the Nebraskan comment on the cold weather and link it up with a prophecy of a cold summer, than the clouds rolled away and we had one of the warmest days this month.

Which reminds us of the good old freshman days when the print shop was located in M. E. building. In the occasional absence of the official weather report the foreman used to peer out through a handy skylight and make a homemade prediction of his own.

The disgruntled seniors of a couple of months ago are probably sadly counting the last days of school and dating by now.

For some unknown reason exchanges from other schools reach the Nebraskan in the following manner: two copies each from western schools on the coast; every other copy in bunches of two from the eastern schools; and an average of one copy each from schools in the middle west.

The county treasurers threat to check up on auto licenses from other counties in the following manner: two copies each from western schools on the coast; every other copy in bunches of two from the eastern schools; and an average of one copy each from schools in the middle west.

For their ferocious name, the Vikings are just about the most genteel organization on the campus. For their gentle name, the Innocents know their politics better than Al Smith knows his Tammany hall.

One of the greatest consolations in student journalism for the editors is always just around the corner. In this case it happens that the corner is only 23 more days till graduation, and only 11 or 12 more issues.

In Other Columns

"I see no reason why the University of Michigan should continue to educate students so dumb that they refuse to take advantage of the wonderful courses of study offered them. . . . If they haven't shown a spark of interest by the end of the second year, let them go back to their jobs," says Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, in an article appearing recently in the Terre Haute Tribune.

NOT SOLD

The idea that all business concerns are sold on college men is one of the hallucinations that college students, graduates, and professors are entertaining themselves with. As a matter of fact there are just as many companies which are developing or continuing downright prejudices against college men.

Some employers, however, express their dislike of college men and women in general terms. They say they are less punctual, seem less in earnest, and above all want to keep on having a good time.

Still another cause of the prejudices against college men is their expressed or unexpressed attitude of superiority they think they have acquired in their four years of college life.

The best policy to follow, probably, is to forget to all outside appearance and action that you ever saw the inside of a college, and make the real value show itself in the quality of results you "put out."

Politics Everywhere

The campus is awakening to the fact that politics has crept into almost every phase of extra-curricular activity. The Interfraternity Council, the Boosters Club, and even athletic teams have their little vote-getting tempests.

Now, perhaps we are saying what would better be left unsaid. To call attention to conditions which are unpleasant and indicative of something rotten somewhere, is considered by some persons to be nothing short of disloyalty. But since we are not particularly alarmed as we view student affairs, which are more than slightly tainted by politics, we have no reason to believe that the University will be greatly harmed by what we are saying.

There is no doubt that politics greatly weakens student activities. There is no doubt but that many able young persons spend more of their time in scheming for and soliciting votes than they do in honest endeavor to prove their worth.

But the situation in which the campus finds itself is not discouraging. Of course politics can never be entirely eliminated from institutions backed by groups of persons who hold vague or definite ideals of democracy. As long as emotion plays any part in the choice of leaders, politics will survive.

Perhaps in a few years the good old "spirit" will again be flowing warm and quick, and bonfire-building will again come back into its own.

Take it from an Omahan, this new Red Gas has it all over Dago Red for power in climbing hills. That's all it's good for though.

The Pin Game

What is this pin game, anyway? It's more than a fad, for it has lasted through the years, ever since the first fraternity man pinned his first pin on each of his lady-loves in turn.

Word comes from the University of Nebraska, via the New Student, that one sorority there is quite disturbed over the fact that three of its members do not have some man's fraternity pin.

They seem to feel that such a dearth of pins indicates a lack of the desired rush. They are actually ashamed. The impression given was that any woman would snatch the first bit of Greek metal shoved into her face, rather than go unpinned.

It would be interesting to gather similar data concerning the percentage of sorority women at the University of Kansas who have some manly pin linked with their own. Conditions almost as depressing as those at Nebraska might be revealed. For it is known that in several houses, the woman who is "different" is the one who wears no fraternity pin.

Now, statistics are heart-rending things. More interesting material might be gathered concerning the number of pins each so-called engaged woman has worn during her career on the campus, and also how many other women have at one time worn the pins which are now "out" on some fair young thing.

But the best of this statistical dope would be computed from the percentage of these pin-engagements which eventually terminate in marriage. Yes, they really call it an engagement, although it isn't often designated for what they are engaged.

In college circles, an engagement, and an engagement to be married, are often considered two entirely different things. The former is merely an engagement to date each other exclusively, until one or the other tires of the arrangement, and then the engagement is off.

Every day or so, the word goes around that some couple has "broken up," and that he has his pin back. The campus smiles, and interestedly watches to see where the pin will next go to rest. And so the game goes on.

An Invitation

Students of engineering, and any others who may be interested in the subject, are cordially invited by Manager Harris of the Central Hotel and Cafe to visit and inspect the new Ice Plant and Air-Cooling System now being installed in the basement at 1325 P street.

Engineers and workmen are now at work installing the system, but have gone far enough so that a fair idea can be gained of the plan and machinery. Ask for Mr. Harris or Mr. Nalman at the hotel desk and say that you wish to be shown through the new cooling plant. You are welcome any hour, night or day.
