THE ARMY GAME

With the 1928 Army-Navy game practically out of the question, discussions as to the probability of a Nebraska-Army contest dominate sportdom. The vague suggestions of a week or so ago as to the possibility of such a game have gathered momentum so rapidly that national figures are now involved in the solution of a problem which, it has been intimated, may be decided definitely within the next few days.

"Get the game!" the Husker fan cries, without stopping to consider the various factors which might be involved to so great an extent that Nebraska officials might even be forced to reject the offer of such a con-

To gain a proper conception of the difficulties under which such an agreement must be made, it must be remembered that the 1928 football schedules for both teams (with the exception, of course, of the Navy game on the Army schedule) had been definitely settled. Nebraska had completed its usual eight-game schedule. And among the games is listed a trip to New York to play Syracuse. Added to this is the fact that, under the rules of the newly-formed "Big Six", eight games are the maximum number that can be played during a foot-

Although the exact opinion of the Army officials is not as yet known, it has been stated in eastern papers that West Point officials are unfavorable to the idea of the cadets journeying as far west as Nebraska for a game next season. Although Nebraska representatives are still hoping for a two-year contract in which a game will be played at West Point (or New York) and at Lincoln, rumors are to the effect that the Army offer will probably be limited to a one-year contract for a game either at West Point or New York.

Such problems, then, that are so importast that they cannot be cast aside without serious consideration include:

(1) Would a nine-game schedule, including two trips to the eastern coast, be a justifiable undertaking? Since the only date under consideration is Novemher 24, such an acceptance would mean that Nebraska would meet Pittsburgh at Lincoln on Saturday, November 17. They would then leave for New York on the following Wednesday and would play the Army on Sator Tuesday morning they would make preparations for forced to decide questions of eligibility under the rule. the Thanksgiving game with the Kansas Aggies on Thursday, November 29.

(2) Would such a schedule with the two long trips take the players away from their classes to too great an extent?

(3) Would the members of the "Big Six" make an exception to the rule and allow Nebraska to play the extra game with the Army? And, if one or two did object, what stand could Nebraska, who had been the dominate personality in forming the new conference, take?

The suggestion of a solution to the long-trip disadvantage by playing the game at Chicago is not considered since it has been definitely stated by officials of both institutions that they are absolutely against such a suggestion, regarding such a proposition as merely a financial enterprise in which the principles for which amateur football stands would be lost. Such a proposition has been press box ballyhooing.

Such, then, are briefly the problems which seem to point out the objections to playing such a game under the existing circumstances. On the other hand is the great advantage offered by the increased prestige that Nebraska would undoubtedly gain by playing such an intersectional contest.

Representatives of the Nebraska athletic board are at present weighing these problems carefully and will soon form their final decision.

Nebraska students are waiting for a decision favorable to a 1928 Nebraska-Army game. TICKET SALES BALLYHOO

The recent announcement made by the Kosmet Klub that attendance to the annual Interfraternity Ball to be given next Saturday evening would be limited to three hundred couples was generally received with a shrug of the shoulders and an attitude of "another ticket sales ballyaco". This was not an antagonistic attitude directed against the Interfraternity Ball, but rather one which has resulted from constant abuse of the sales argument of an "exclusive party" in which with the lifeless bodies and provide in their place one demic year, each student will select

So when an organization definitely places such a restriction upon the number of tickets to be sold and risy so common in such bodies and would prefer to see study upon it, getting up his own then abides by its statement, the action is worthy of no student government than one in name only.

Such is the present ticket sales policy of the Kosmet Klub. Approximately two hundred twenty-five tickets have already been sold. When the remaining number (amounting to less than three tickets to a fraternity) are sold the campaign will be closed.

"Since when has the Kosmet Klub become so altruistic?" the cynic asks. The Klub, however, lays claim to no such high motive.

Since the Interfraternity Ball is a well-established social function the committee has not been forced to rely upon such sales argument for attendance. And so it strives to gain prestige by planning a party that would be one of the best of the year. Too large a crowd would defeat that purpose. Thus the restriction upon ticket sales.

COLLEGE MOVIES

There has been, in the last few months, a growing feeling among university students in the country against the so-called "college life" moving pictures. Students at Princeton have petitioned the theater operators not to show any more such pictures there.

This is just another phase of the old story, running Lyman Cass a good horse to death. Students enjoyed the first depictions of their mode of life. They laughed and said, "Go to the movies and learn about college life." Advertisers, realizing that the eyes of the nation are focused on the younger generation, played their part well, advertising "college life as it it,"

The people of the country are human and they are impressionable. When they see a picture that has been termed popular, and that picture shows the students at an institution of learning leading a carefree existence, they immediately get the idea that such is the true situation. As for the students, they enjoy seeing a comedy taken from college life. Any satire, if presented in the proper manner, is popular. But the constant repitation of seeing the green freshman win in athletic contests over the star athlete is getting tiresome. Some few pictures truly depict college life. Others show the star football player mixed up in some scandal or a dastardly plot and declared ineligible for competition, only to have the affair straightened out and to dash into the game with "one minute to go" and win for his alma mater. And the pretty little co-ed always has a hand in winning the game by telling the hero that she really loves him-and not the other fellow.

Entertainment? Yes. But the college student is tiring of being portrayed as the original flaming youth.

LEGISLATION!

An interesting piece of legislation was recently passed by the state high school athletic association. It decreed that students purposely flunking hours so as to L. C.
