NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY The Kansas dislikes the idea of the D. A. R. black-listing people today who are no more worthy of black-listing than the fathers of the D. A. R. Says the Kansan:

There used to be something about that boy that I liked—but he spent it.—Sou'wester.

AGE AND EDUCATION The Michigan Daily discourses at length on the advantages of starting out in life with the freshness of youth, and then concludes:

What did you learn from the World War? Why we use pistols to start our track teams with.—Adapted from The Sou'wester.

JABBERWOCKY Victorian England saw Charles Lutwidge Dodgson as a promising young mathematics lecturer at Oxford with his treatises attracting attention in academic circles.

Perhaps it is too much to hope that among ten thousand thesis writers at Harvard there may be that Cantabrigian Ed Wynn, that perfect fool, who, like another Leacock, will bring nonsense laurels to the American university.—Harvard Crimson.

Philosophers say that the life and drum are the best to stir up the martial spirit, but rooming house inmates think that saxophones are by far the better.—Daily Texan.

CASH ART An English poet, ranked as one of the finest from a literary standpoint, recently remarked that he would have to go back to his old trade of selling automobiles, for his last book had sold only two hundred copies in all England.

These two facts indicate again the increasing difficulty of finding a publisher for good books, and the journalistic nature of almost the entire body of contemporary literature.

The English poet mentioned said also that he knew six publishers. Three years ago there would have been little difficulty in finding a publisher. Now it is virtually impossible, for even the English publishers had finally succumbed to the lure of large profits and were not interested in "art for art's sake".

All this leads one to wonder what if any literary value this generation will leave to futurity. It is fast becoming absurd to look for a modern masterpiece, and any book which does survive for a number of years is likely to result from an involuntary miracle rather than true appreciation of its worth.

Such contests will merit the attention of the newspaper and the publicity which scholarship would thus receive will bring the realization to the reading public that studies, after all, play a dominant part in the life of a student.

in hand, bawling the fact that he has hit the wrong nail. But, as Henry Ford used to say, "it won't be long now" till the parade floats receive their finishing touches and will be moving down O street.

It won't be long till the agricultural campus will be dressed up to show the visitors that the students are practical as well as theoretical. So, on that eventful day, May 5, if the weather elements are favorable, it is predicted that the campus will have more visitors than ever before.

Parade Starts at 11:30 At 11:30 o'clock the parade will move down O street. There will be no elephants or steam calliopes, but Robin Spence, who is in charge of the parade, says that the primary purpose of the parade is to depict the past and present in Nebraska agriculture, and that it will not be lacking in comedy and color.

The exhibits will be held in the Student Activities building. Under the supervision of Clarence Bartlett, the exhibits will show the work of all the departments of the college, thirteen in all. These exhibits will be of chemistry, soils, agronomy, horticulture, entomology, plant path.

The livestock parade will show representatives from each breed of the various classes of livestock maintained by the college. Victor Sanders, who has charge of the parade, says: "The International has its parade and so has Farmers' Fair. The International gets its exhibits from the best in the land while Farmers' Fair draws its exhibits from one of the best college herds in the country."

Closest contests are anticipated in the race for the three positions on the Student Publications board and for the two men to be elected as seniors-at-large. Vigorous contests are also expected in the contests for junior men from the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Law, and for junior women from the College of Arts and

Annual Spring Election Will Be Held Today

The pageant promises to be one of the most attractive events of the day. "Master of Miracles" was written by Maxine Churchill, senior in the department of home economics, and the cast consists entirely of students from that department.

There will be two show tents, one for the Follies and one for the Snorpeum. The follies will be an all female cast and the Snorpeum will include a no-female cast.

Two dances will be held in the evening, one in the Student Activities building and one on an outdoor floor. Beck's ten piece orchestra will furnish music in the building and the Collegians will be on the outside platform.

With his accordion, will alternate with the two orchestras.

Every precaution is being made by the election committee to insure a clean election. System, similar to that used in the two elections for class officers this year, will be used again.

Co-Eds Enter Race

Failure of more than one eligible girl to file for the two positions open to senior women led to rumors of other sorority candidates who would be written in. Pi Beta Phi announced Monday that Laura M. Buchanan's name would be written in by that sorority in an attempt to elect her and Gamma Phi Beta announced the same of Mary Ball. Rumors of an alliance of these two organizations with other sororities running candidates to elect both by writing in their names were prevalent yesterday.

Announcement of the results of the election will be carried by The Daily Nebraskan to the Interfraternity and Panhellenic banquets as soon as the winning candidates are determined. Count of the ballots will begin as soon as the polls close at 5 o'clock. Council officials estimate that results will not be available before 7:30 o'clock at the earliest.

ELECTIONS: FAIR AND WARMER

Despite the fact that there are a few who decry student elections as "fixed" and "crooked" (like the poor, we have them with us always) the general attitude prevailing the campus is that the election today will be conducted in an orderly and fair manner.

As to the actions of political parties and individual students one can predict nothing. There will undoubtedly be attempts to vote or secure votes by unfair methods. We say "attempts" because a logical plan for checking up on such measures has been formulated and any violations of the election regulations are likely to be discovered.

After the difficulty of getting by the various "politicians" in front of the Temple, waiting in line for a chance to vote, and then convincing the committee of the right to a ballot, students should be satisfied with one vote. For those whose political energies still remain undiminished we suggest that they confine their activities to campaigning. It will be safer.

SCHOLASTIC COMPETITION

The latest in interscholastic innovations is the fund of $125,000 which was given by Mrs. William Lowell Putnam to Harvard university to be used in the promotion of interscholastic competition in scholarship. The first of the events is to be held April 30 between Yale and Harvard in a test lasting three hours and covering the field of English literature.

Today the leading form of interscholastic competition is in athletics. Thousands of dollars are spent in the carrying out of the physical education and preparation for these contests and it is not unusual to see thousands of people massed into a stadium to see two universities place the best they have in athletics in opposition to each other.

This is not said with any intention of minimizing the benefit derived from the present extent of athletics, but rather to show the extent to which such training and system has stretched the resulting benefits, and the value of interscholastic competition.

And now the incentive of interscholastic competition has been added to scholarship. It would be useless to advocate that there will come a time when crowds rivaling those of the football classics will gather to watch such competition. There is not enough of the spectacular to attract the public in such a degree.

Such contests will merit the attention of the newspaper and the publicity which scholarship would thus receive will bring the realization to the reading public that studies, after all, play a dominant part in the life of a student.
