PRE-MED DAY
Pre-Med students will be guests of the College of Medicine at Omaha today and tomorrow.

Engaged in the activities of Engineers' Week, Pharmacy Week, Farmers' Fair, and preparations for Bizad Day, little attention is given to this week-end trip of the Pre-Meds.

Some students taking the Pre-Med course have never witnessed an operation. Others have only a vague idea of the requisites of such a profession.

Such a trip as is being taken this week-end clears many of these problems. Those interested in the study return to their work with the added spirit of one who has caught a glimpse of his goal.

We are glad that the College of Medicine extends this invitation and we hope that those students taking advantage of the opportunity do so with a realization of the purpose of the trip.

WHAT ABOUT SMOKING?
The story published over the nation about Freddie Riggs, four-year-old Seattle boy, who smokes cigars, carries with it the statement that Freddie's intelligence has been advanced one year above the average by his use of tobacco for two years.

Dr. J. Rosslyn Earp of Antioch college recently gave a report intended to show the relationship between the use of tobacco and scholarship.

The opinion of Dr. Rufus A. Lyman, dean of the College of Pharmacy and professor of physiology, supports the finding of Dr. Earp.

Dean Lyman explains that harm from nicotine on grown men is more physical than mental.

Even while we have hundreds of brilliant men today who are inveterate smokers, there is no telling what their brilliancy might be if they were abstainers.

Dean Lyman suggests there may be relationship to scholarship because mental inactivity may be brought about by physical weaknesses caused by use of "the weed" and the mental faculties thus dulled.

IN ANSWER TO T. M.
In an article appearing this morning in the Soap Box, the writer, T. M., decries the lack of a suitable recreational parlor on this campus.

Many schools are building some place in which students may gather. The new Union building at the University of Texas is an example of this trend.

Nebaska has no such building at the present time, but T. M. should bear in mind that Ellen Smith hall serves the purpose for the co-eds.

T. M. suggests that a recreational parlor be placed in Andrews hall. But the floors of this building have been completed, and all available space has been made into classrooms.

At some later date a plan such as T. M. suggests might be worked out, but the need of more classrooms is too great for the consideration of it now.

ORGANIZATION FINANCE
Fraternities and sororities have come to be looked upon as a business undertaking by the commercial world, and as an outcome of this new attitude the Campaign Credit Men's association is conducting a campaign of the treatment of outstanding statements at the end of the spring semester by the various organized bodies.

The purpose of such a survey is to warn merchants of certain houses who make a policy of allowing June bills to run over to the following September. In outlining the program of the credit men, the secretary explained that the merchants were not complaining about the amount of the bills, but the unfair treatment and total disregard for credit obligations shown by some organizations.

Much difficulty is encountered each fall in impressing upon new officers the necessity of paying up outstanding statements, and maintaining a clean credit slate. This is due chiefly to the lack of understanding by new officers, or a failure to recognize the serious position in which they place themselves by such a procedure.

Results of the survey will be distributed to the merchant members of the association that they may limit the credit allowances of the offenders. Organizations who formerly passed off budget deficiencies on the goodwill of local merchants, hoping against hope that no action to enforce payment would be taken, will have to mend their ways, or find themselves on the credit blacklist, for stringent methods will be employed to enforce payments before summer vacation.—The Daily Illini.

EDUCATION
In his discussion of University problems, President Spencer, in his inaugural address, epigrammatically summed up a solution to the much discussed subject of mass education in the following words:

To every boy or girl an opportunity, but to no boy or girl an opportunity beyond his deserts.

Standards at the University have been raised and it is harder now to get in, harder to stay in and harder to graduate. But by this process of making the University a place requiring more effort to earn a diploma, the value of the sheepskin has been enhanced.

With high requirements the charges of mass education against a university should be taken as a compliment to the university and the people it serves.—University of Washington Daily.

RULES FOR "IT"
"Gentlemen prefer blonds" is a popular quotation and it is said the reason is that blonds are dumber than brunets. There are several more reasons, too, but another phrase, "beautiful, but dumb," has added impetus to the first reason.

Several fraternity eds have given the matter their serious consideration, and have arrived at some important scientific "dents", sugar-coated pills of wisdom for the girls who want to either get over big and don't, or those who do get over and don't want to. For the latter, it is suggested that they do everything the rules say not to, and not do anything the rules say to do.

Feeling that it is easier to tell a woman "what not to do" than "what to do," these philosophers or optimists, have outlined the following set of rules, take heed, to wit:

Don't look over our shoulder to read our newspaper. Go buy them—at any newsstand—five cents.

Don't say you "just adore" another boy, or girl who is our rival or yours.

Don't accept an invitation to have a sandwich and a coke and then order a full meal and a chocolate malt.

Don't keep us waiting more than a half hour. Don't say you are reducing—and then eat everything in sight and order more.

On the way to a picture show in a bus, don't rave about a wonderful musical comedy in Oklahoma City. Don't ask our opinion as to the wisdom of retaining or doing away with your long hair.

Don't explain that you know that it is bad form, but that you just love to chew gum, especially when we do not have said article.

Don't pose your cigaret gracefully and then puff the smoke out before you have had time to taste it. Don't be afraid to accept a date at the last minute, especially when you want it. We know we're supposed to think you're popular.

Don't be avidly interested in the things you say shock you.

Don't be continually looking for dates for your rushees.

Follow these points, dear girls, and not even Dr. Frank Crane's five-minute talks on personality can make you more popular.—Oklahoma Daily.

placed large beds upon them for the construction of the floats. The float committees will today finish them for the big parade down 'O' street tomorrow.

The progress on the Pageant is nearly over except minor details concerning the setting and costumes. The diligent practice by the participants has resulted in what will be one of the best productions fair crowds will have witnessed.

Every department about the campus has been busy for several days with the preparation of the exhibits and they promise to portray the value of an agricultural education in a very interesting and instructive manner.

Every Ag Student Helps
The showers of yesterday afternoon put a damper on construction for a short time, but the construction committee under Cecil Means, will be at work early today in order to finish the large amount of work before evening. In fact every College of Agriculture student will be on hand early to lend a helping hand with the numerous jobs to be finished.

The Snorphem and Follies entertainers have been holding rehearsals nightly for the past week and are prepared to furnish entertainment to presentation of the Sigma Tau award by Dean T. J. Thompson to the freshman engineer having the highest average at the end of his freshman year; the presentation of the Sigma Tau picture by K. K. Crowover to the Hall of Fame and the Fee award which will be given by Marvin Haith.

Dean O. J. Ferguson will announce next year's Blue Print staff.

Following these events Thorne Browne, district representative of the National Electric Light association will deliver the main speech of the banquet. Mr. Brown graduated from the Arts and Science College at Nebraska in 1907. He is also president of the Kiwanis club. The subject of Brown's talk will be "The Government in Business".

Some time during the evening the official scandal sheet will be distributed to the attendants, The Sledge, an annual publication.

Many Novel Displays
People were amazed and many wondered in what world they were in when they went through the various buildings of the College of Engineering and saw the many interesting, novel and unique displays that seemed to be at every side.

Through the cooperation of the departments of geology and physics the night was made better still, hundreds of people passing through the halls and corridors of Morrill hall. In the E. E. building eggs were made to fry and there was no source of heat. Iron rods were heated to a red intensity in water and then were pounded and twisted into various shapes. Mastodonian jaws broke up specimens that were put under test in the testing laboratories in the C. E. building.

Over in the northwest corner of the campus could be heard the put-put-put of several engines of various types, music was heard at frequent intervals and intermittently came that "terrible noise", as many were heard to say, which was emitted from the electric organ which was being operated by some of the members of the department of electrical engineering.

Lights were ablaze and even the darkness of the sky and the disagreeableness of the evening did not seem to thwart the fact that Engineers' Week was going to be a success in spite of the climatic elements themselves.

KNOW YOUR KAMPUS

Do you know that?
The Nebraska State Historical Society was founded September 25, 1878, at a meeting held in the Commercial hotel in Lincoln. About thirty well-known citizens of the state were present. Robert W. Furnas was chosen president and Professor Samuel Aughey, secretary.

Previous to this date, on August 26, 1867, the State Historical Society and Library Association was incorporated in order to receive from the state the gift of the block of ground, now known as Haymarket Square. This original historical association held no meetings. It was superseded by the present State Historical Society.

The Society has had its headquarters, and exhibits in the basement of the main library for a great number of years. Secretary A. E. Sheldon has been connected with the organization for twenty years.

the thousands of people visiting their tents during the fair.

The annual pre-fair dance for the Ags and Home Ecs will again be held this evening after the work of preparation has been completed. All Ags who have been working during the day are urged to wear their old clothes to the affair in order to lend color to the occasion.

Visitors at the fair will have two opportunities to dance. Beck's orchestra will play under the tent, and the Collegians will play in the Student Activities building. "Mike" Kopac will alternate between the two orchestras with his accordion.

Research Laboratory
The research laboratory was under the supervision of Dr. Fred W. Upson, who performed experiments for the visitors and Dr. H. M. Harshaw was in charge of the bio-chemistry laboratory.

Each division of the department of chemistry held exhibits last evening. A lacquer display was loaned to the department by the Du Pont de Nemours corporation and the General Motors division through the courtesy of the Nebraska Buick company.

A demonstration showing electro-metric apparatus and making chemical analysis was under the direction of Dr. D. A. Brown. One of the most interesting parts of the display was the blowing of glass into various forms. The exhibits lasted until 11 o'clock.

THAT VARSITY DRAG!
NOW come the perfect days of the college year—the swing-outs, the meets, the picnics, the sophomore-senior proms, and then the big parade!
The fresh has almost worn off the frosh, and from one end of the campus to the other you'll hear mighty few pairs of the old hard heels. The world has gone Wing-foot, that's why.
And so it should. Goodyear
Wingfoot Heels are rubber—new, live, cushioning rubber—rubber that gives, and lifts, and helps. They have that "look! look!" style, and they wear like a new gold key.
More people walk on Goodyear Wingfoot Heels than on any other kind. Get in line! A minute's huddle with your favorite shoe repairman, and you're stepping out on Goodyear Wingfoot Heels. Yes, today!

To the Editor:
The campus of the University of Nebraska lacks a recreation parlor. This is something that is very essential to university life and higher education. Many universities have such a social parlor and it has met the enthusiastic approval of the students.

On our campus there is no place for students to stop and converse or enjoy a few minutes of spare time. If students wish to stop and that it is necessary to stop in the crowded halls or in front of buildings where they interfere with those wishing to go to classes.

The above statement might be a little exaggerated for students are nearly always sitting on the curb in front of Social Science building. But this is no appropriate place to loiter.

It would be a good thing and would certainly be appreciated if the proper university authorities would see fit to find room—if it is possible—for a recreation parlor in the new building. It is being erected. It would afford a meeting place for students, a social center, and would aid greatly in creating a better feeling among students. It would also do away with much of the congestion and noise around the classrooms.
