Food for the Fans

"Out of the dawn, there came the sunshine,
Out of the dawn, a dream came true."

And so goes the theme song of the Vitaphone success, "Warming Up" starring Richard Dix. (Rialto) Dix appears in the role of Bert Tolliver, rookie base ball player who has aspirations to join the New York Yankees. Several amusing and disturbing incidents take place to add humor and anxiety to the story. Dix is immense in his part, yes he even looks the part.

Locale of the story is placed in the spring training camp of the Yankees and later on the base ball diamonds of the major league clubs. The picture is climaxed by an exciting world series championship game. Vitaphone makes it possible to hear the cheering of the throng, the plays called by the umpire, the crack of the bat as it connects with the ball and all the other things that go with a ball game. This effect contrasted with the soft melodic strains of "Out of the Dawn," played while Dix woos Marjorie Post (played by Jean Arthur) reveals the color and tone which have only come to the screen with the advent of the "talkies."

"Take Me Home"—sounds like the termination of a long argument doesn't it, but really, it's the title of Bebe Daniels' vehicle now showing at the Lincoln. Bebe is a chorus girl and befriends Neil Hamilton who has come to the city to be a juggler. The love plot develops with a new brand of complications and the clever climax—well, drop in and see for yourself.

Supporting Miss Daniels and Mr. Hamilton are Lilyan Tashman, Doris Hill, Joe E. Brown, Ernie Wood, and several other well-known personages of the screen.

On the stage we find Mack and Stanton, doing bits called "Home Sweet Home." Clever gags help to set off an equally clever idea. Preceding this pair are Lauren and Ladare in "Moosic" and believe us this team's gospel is "variety is the spice and so forth." Everything from accordians and pitch pipes to shoe horns and hum drums were used by the team. Closing the stage show are Beehee and Rubyatte, "athletes who are different." Grecian setting and costumes add a nice touch of color to the tumbling act.

Chaney, the master-menace of the screen, has changed his tactics. He is still the same menace as ever but he has a different objective in "While the City Sleeps." This time he is a menace to the enemies of society and not to those with whom the audience is in sympathy. The complex character of Chaney's role displays his fine ability—the hard boiled detective on one side and on the other—his love for simple home life.

"While the City Sleeps" is a hit for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and is a new success for Mr. Chaney. (Orpheum)

An empire hung on that strap

THE hitch must be right, the pack must be tight. On details such as that hung the attainment of the day's goal and the final success of the expedition.

Lewis and Clark, first Americans to cross the continent, knew the importance of "trifles" in the concerted plan. They saw to it their equipment was right, they supervised every step from man-power to pack-horse-power, they applied sure knowledge and constant vigilance to their task.

Today's leaders in business have the same point of view.

Men in the Bell System, exploring new country, take infinite pains in preparation. They work toward the smooth coordination of engineering, manufacturing, warehousing, accounting, finance, public service.
