NEBRASKA TRIPLE THREAT

"Dutch" Witte, Cornhusker halfback and triple-threat man, is one of the backfield aces that will be back on the Husker squad next year to help Nebraska turn in another Big Six football championship. Witte came to Nebraska from Lincoln high school where he established himself in gridiron circles. Witte passes, kicks and runs with the ball with the skill of an expert and is a valuable man in the Husker backfield. He is light, weighing only 166 pounds but his weight is only a hindrance on a soggy field for when he has a dry field ahead, he is hard to stop.

CO-CAPTAIN AND GUARD

Co-Captain Elmer Holm, guard on the Husker eleven and one of the outstanding linemen in the Big Six conference, has played his last year for the Scarlet eleven. Elmer was hindered by early season injuries but before mid-season he was back in condition and thundering his way through the opposing lines that went against the mighty Cornhusker "powerhouse." Elmer hails from Omaha and will leave a place in the Husker forward wall that will be hard to fill next season.

SOPHOMORE TRIPLE-THREATER

Claude Rowley was the greatest discovery of the entire season. He entered the ranks of the varsity football camp this year and before the season was ended, Coach Boaz, had uncovered one of the best punters that Nebraska football fans have seen in recent years. His punting is his specialty, but he can run with that pluck. He handles three departments of the game like an expert. He carries the oval around end as a dash man takes the curve doing the century. Rowley comes to Nebraska from Clyde, Kansas, where he thrilled high school fans with his long punts and passes. He has two more years of service wearing the Scarlet for Nebraska and critics predict great things in the gridiron for this flash in Husker togs.

HUSKER WINGMAN

Cliff Ashburn, 180-pound Cornhusker end, who has just completed his last year of football competition with the Nebraska Cornhuskers. Cliff was one of the best defensive wingmen in the Cornhusker camp and his last play of the season was when he engaged a snow-covered plunk in the Kansas Aggie game and crossed the goal line for the only Husker touchdown. Ashburn played regularly at the end position all season and played the position with the ability of a veteran. He was selected on many of the Big Six eleven due to his ability to get down under punts and his power to the Husker eleven.
