Pardon; every play must have two or three love scenes to be worth the walk through the snow, and the price of admission so this is no exception. George Holt, actor and erstwhile student in the college of business administration, has a love scene with Irene Lavely, a fine arts student, which should weld the two schools in a close bond of fellowship.

For five minutes at a stretch, Ceorge makes love to Irene, according to Hoyle and in full view of the audience, which always makes any play good. However, all this goes to show man's devoted admiration for the weaker sex, and woman's ill-appreciation.

Yenne Tries Sculptoring

The play, "He and She," deals with a couple of sculptors, if you can imagine Herb Yenne, as one, but that all goes to make the play, and provides an evening of good entertainment Elwood adds the real philosophy and foun-dation of morale to the production will be over shortly after nine which is highly amusing as well as to change her costume in the middle of the first act, which adds greatly to the variation of the plot and the appearance of the personnel. However, her part in the play is appealing, if anyone should be interested in woman's rights and the extension of such, but the finale? A secret.

Play Has Interesting Climax When the third act has reached its climax, the tables are turned and those hands which once mod eled clay, are soon to sweep the kitchen floor, and the patient, hard-working, loving husband re-ceives his just dues in the last act, with the culmination of the plan of having two geniuses in the

The debate was held in Trinity Methodist church and sponsored by the Trinity community club.

Professor Aylsworth in proclaim ing the advantages of the council-manager system, declared that the managing of city affairs is big business and big business demands the business methods. He said that no corporation would attempt to carry its work without a capable head to direct the various departments making up the organization and that similarly, a trained leader is required, in city government, to act in conjunction with a city council elected by popular vote of the peo-
