Schultem Practice Baton Passing for Des Moines Track Carnival

FOOTBALL MEN TO RUN

Bracey, Elder, Simpson Will Appear on Cinders at Week's Headliner

J. Flavin's Tuesday night affair forced Nebraska's Varsity cinder performers in under the stadium to continue their preparation for the Drake Relays, Friday and Saturday at Des Moines. Scheduled try-outs for the games were postponed until today with the hope of being able to continue activities outside.

Coach Schulte announced that the Cornhusker squad would be cut for the Iowa classic, stating that entrants in the relay events would be only in the shuttle hurdle, the quarter and half mile distances and in the mile event. One shot putter, a pole vaulter, high jumper and one broad jumper will also be included in the entrants. Four football sprinters will also make the trip to compete in the special football relay between Nebraska, Drake, Notre Dame and the Army.

Practice Baton Passing

Baton passing furnished the biggest activity for the afternoon in an extra effort to perfect the exchange of the stick. Shuttle hurdle relay performers concentrated on starts and the touch off in their pet event, which they hope to win and set a new record.

The entrance list of the Drake games has swelled to well over the two hundred mark with the high schools, colleges and universities making the high total. Nebraska will compete with nearly forty other institutions in the university division.

Week's Headliner

Members of all the Big Six schools, Big Ten schools and southern conference members will be in attendance to make the annual affair the headlining tangle of this week's events. Competition in all the events promises to be keen with world's champions competing in the individual events.

Special interest is growing over the scheduled individual competition in the 100 yard dash. Bracey of Rice Institute, Texas, Elder of Notre Dame and Simpson of Ohio State, the country's leading sprinters, will meet in this special race, which should prove to be a thriller without a doubt.

Reached its ideal but every year it grows better," he concluded.

Following the talk by Dr. Keim, committee reports were called for and each chairman responded with a short report of the plans and work being done. William Lancaster reported the horse show program as complete and stated that the program included features not usually available at the best of horse shows.

Among other reports, all of which indicated a bigger and better fair than ever before, Bob Lankelison advised the wearing of smoked glasses when attending the fairs show and to be prepared for hilarity at any cost.

All the chairmen expressed the desire for co-operation with other committees in the matter of materials and other details. That the work was ready to start was evidenced by every chairman's definite statements as to the individual committee plans.

Cliff Webster who is in charge of construction stated that his gang would be on the job this week and to build the fence about the campus. Fred Sundeen, chairman of concessions, expects a ferris wheel to be erected on the grounds before the end of the week.

Robin Spence dismissed the group with the reminder of the ten remaining days before the fair and the great deal of work to be done in preparation.

burly man and a strong one intellectually, a rough kindly man, a free thinker and a radical, very dreadful things to be in those days it took a brave man then as ever to challenge the established order of things and thought.

Doctor Had Reputation

The doctor had a great reputation as such. King George the third wished to have him as his medical man, but Erasmus would not think of leaving the country. He wrote a great deal of poetry, which probably would never have lasted had it not been parodied by George Canning. Prime minister at that time. Mr. Collins pointed out that Dr. Darwin was captivated by the sexual classification of plants which had recently been introduced by Linnaeus. He wrote a long poem entitled "The Loves of the Plants."

Canning pointed out the fancifulness of the ideas, with the result that the works of both of the men are preserved. The doctor wrote a good deal of prose too, most of which is out of date today, but the curator called attention to the fact that in his writing the "Portland Vase," about which Mr. Collins talked last week, was mentioned. The price paid for the vase by the Duke of Portland was a thousand guineas, just over five thousand dollars. It will be interesting to see how much the Portland family made on their investment, when they sell the vase on May 2.

Speaks on Ambergis

Mr. Collins then spoke of Ambergis, a substance which is of great value in the making of delicate perfumes. This is gotten from the great Sperm-whale of the southern seas. This whale feeds largely on the cuttle fish, some parts of which it cannot digest, which results in a morbid growth on the inside of the whale. Recently a large lump of this was discovered on the beach in Auckland, New Zealand, by two brothers who as a result attained a fortune of a hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. This lump is lying in a vault in Minicing Lane, one of the great trading districts of London. It weighs about two hundred pounds, one of the largest masses on record and is worth, that is the best parts of it, about five pounds an ounce (twenty dollars).

Ambergis is valuable not for its own smell, which is not particularly pleasant, but it is dissolved in alcohol and thus made use of in blending with other perfumes as a fixative to give them a lasting property. "As a solid perfume ambergis will retain its odor for centuries and there is an authenticated record that it has been detected after a period of three hundred years. It was formerly used in medicine in the east, and it was, and may be still, used in cooking."

concert debut in Gratz and went to Dresden to study under Franz M. Wuellner. It was not long before she made her operatic debut as 'Aucuba' in "Il Trovatore" at the Dresden opera. She remained with this royal opera company for four years, being married in the third, and then progressed in Hamburg Her husband died there, leaving her with five children and pitifully small pay.

During an engagement in Berlin opera she met Lillian Nordica who took interest in her and begged her to come to America, but she was first to have the honor of singing in the Wagnerian shrine at Bayreuth. For two years Maurice Grau, impresario of the Metropolitan opera in New York tried to secure her for America but another contract with the Hamburg opera prevented her coming here until 1929. The American public took Schumann-Heink, artist mother, straight to its heart.

other two men who are expected to make the trip this week end.

In the first round of the tournament Robertson defeated Zelen to the count of 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Then Sherman played Fullbrook and came through 6-3, 6-2. But in the second round Sherman was let down when Cameron emerged with the score of 8-6, 2-6, 6-4. In the next game, Fullbrook won from Robertson, 6-4, 6-4.

The third round began last week and finished up the first of this week with Robertson winning from Cameron in three sets, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3, but Robertson in turn was defeated by Sherman, 6-4, 6-2.

count, 19-21. The last set was not as long. Cameron won it 6-3. Two final games were played on the indoor courts. Sherman and Cameron both defeated Zelen, by the scores 6-3, 6-2, and 3-6, 6-0, respectively.
