(By ELSIE BRODKEY)

'Charles Wakefield Cadman's cantata, 'The Father of Waters' is one of his most famous compositions and is the very best of musical productions. I heartily endorse it,' stated Wilbur Chenoweth of the Bendix Publishing company, and noteworthy composer and organist.

The cantata, which the university Choral Union will present tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall under the direction of Howard Kirkpatrick, will be broadcast over University station through KFAB. An orchestra of 17 pieces will assist in the entertainment.

Discovery of Mississippi The story is based on a series of episodes relating to the discovery of the Mississippi river. Through the medium of a historian the audience is acquainted with the experiences of De Soto and his men and the adventures of explorers who settled along the river valley. An effective description is made by the librettist's use of the country. 'Cedars and hemlocks and aspens that circle the verge of Iliaca, at the head of the great river'

Chorus of Indian chant the chorus of the 'Father of Waters' sings. 'The song waters' they sing. 'The song waters' they sing. 'The song waters' they sing. 'The song waters' they sing.

The presentation of songs so vividly portrays the spirit of the adventures, the grief of De Soto's mourners as he is buried in secret at midnight, 'the pathos of the Indian mothers bidding goodbye to the loved ones, the sentiment of white lovers singing as they stroll along the waters, and the alarm of a coming war. "Spirit of Freedom," an impressive, semi-patriotic chorus concludes the program.

The orchestra is composed of Carl Steckelberg, Ernest Harrison, Ethel Owen, Valleria Callen, Herbert Witte, Dorothy Holcomb, Abe Hill, Lillian Eiche, Harry Warfel, Mark Pierce, Laurence Tyler, William Quirk, Luther Andrews, Don Berry, A. R. Haeny, Ray Ryerson and Fieda Graham Ziegenfels.

BURR TELLS OF GREAT DEMAND FOR AG GRADS Continued from Page 1 door life and for working with plants and animals in order to like the work in the College of Agriculture. In professional agriculture, the recent graduate is further removed from such outdoor work but he generally finds a field where he will have at least a small contact with it.

Girls in order to like the work in their division of the College of Agriculture, should enjoy training that fits them for teaching or research work along lines that pertain to the home, according to the dean.

Young men who become high school teachers after graduating from our college earn a salary the first year of approximately $1,800 to $2,000, declared Dean Burr. "After they have been teaching a few years they may receive as much as $3,000. Teachers in home economics receive a somewhat smaller salary.

Financial Return Good "The extension field pays both young men and women a salary of $1,800 and up on the start. Other professional lines generally draw salaries as large as those. Cash returns for the first year or two received by students who enter farm work are less than the salaries received by those who enter professional work. Considered through a period of years, however, it is very probable that the financial return of the farmers will be greater than that of the professional workers."

Dean Burr explained this fact by stating that farming is a profession which cannot be grown into all at once. The farming student accumulates his riches by a steady gain in the amount of material wealth. The dean thinks that both men and women students of the College of Agriculture receive salaries which compare well with other professions.

Prominent Men in Field "The limit to a person's progress in this field of work has not been set at the present time any more than in any other field of work," asserted Dean Burr. "For instance, one of our students named Pugsley who graduated only twenty years ago is now president of the South Dakota College of Agriculture at Brookings.

BOARD MEETS TO APPOINT HEADS OF PUBLICATIONS Continued from Page 1 have applied for that position. Joyce Ayres, 30, Lincoln; and Cliff Sandahl, 30, Genoa, are at present serving as managing editors. Managing editors are usually named from those who have served as news editors on The Nebraskan.

Eleven Files for News Editors For the positions of news editors eleven have applied, six of which will receive appointments. The staff of news editors was reduced to five during the past semester, due to the technical ineligibility of one news editor, but the usual number will serve next semester.

Those who are now working as news editors are Earl Anderson, 30, Lincoln; Don Carlson, 31, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Jack Elliott, 30, Lincoln; William McCleery, 31, Hastings; and Gene Robb, 30, Lincoln.

Business of The Daily Nebraskan is handled by a business manager and three assistants. One student has applied for business manager, and three for assistants, leaving little doubt as to the selection of men for these positions. Milton McGrew, 29, Greeley, Colo., is the present business manager, with Lynn Cass, 29, Ravenna; William Kearns, 29, Lincoln; and Marshall Pitzer, 30, Nebraska City, acting as assistants.

File for Cornhusker From two applicants the Student Publication board will select an editor for the 1930 Cornhusker. This position, as well as all others on the Cornhusker staff, continues through two semesters instead of changing as do the other publication staff members. William C. Meenter, 29, Cheyenne, Wyo., is editor of the 1929 Cornhusker, which will be released today.

Five have applied for managing editors, two of whom will be elected. Art Bailey, 30, Ord, and Gordon Larson, Cheyenne, Wyo., have just completed a year's work as managing editors.

For the position of business manager two have applied, Bruce H. Thomas, 29, Mound City, Mo., is the outgoing business manager. Two assistant business managers will be selected from six applicants. George Kennedy, 31, Omaha, and Clark Swanson, 31, Omaha, served as assistants on the 1929 year book.

Three applications have been received for editor of the Argwan, humorous publication. Douglas Zimmerman, 30, Lincoln, was the editor and put out the last Argwan, "Bye, Bye Number" last week.

As assistants to the editor, two will be selected. Dean Holmson, 30, Omaha; and Ray Murray, 31, Topeka, Kan., were last semester's managing editors. Murray having served in that capacity for two semesters.
