The new house will be located at 557 North Sixteenth street, just south of the Sigma Nu house, and will be on the corner of the new library mall.

The exterior will be built of red brick and natural stone and the architectural design of English colonial and French chateau.

The main floor of the interior will be divided into one large living room on the south extending the length of the house east and west, and the north half will be divided into three rooms, a music room, card room and a guest room.

The second floor will be divided into two-man study rooms. The dormitory and chapter room will be on the third floor. The dining room and the kitchen will be located in the basement. The present location of the fraternity is at 1141 D street.

EVELYN ADLER TELLS OF 'Y' WORK

Toward the end of her work she was entrusted with some pressing. The floor on which she worked had but one sink. It was used for all purposes including washing, drinking, and for dampening the clothes. There was no special place for the women to eat their lunch.

Miss Adler worked on the average of nine and a half hours a day and received twelve dollars a week for her services. Many women worked even longer hours. Although Illinois has a ten hour day law for women the employers have devised means for evading it.

Rooms Are Cheap. Miss Adler spent no money during the six weeks that she did not earn herself. She had most of the clothes that she needed before she went to Chicago. Her room cost her a dollar a week. "It was worth no more than that," she stated. "It was about the size of an ordinary clothes closet. I had no hangers for my clothes, the room contained a small bed, table and chair."

Plenty of Bed Bugs. "And there were plenty of bed bugs," she added. "But after a time I didn't mind them, I was so tired." Miss Adler stayed at the Mary Dawes hotel. Three hundred women stayed there. The hotel was erected by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes for a home for working women as a memorial to his mother.

On her way to work Miss Adler saw the homes and children of the poorer people of Chicago. The children always had candy in the mornings when she was on her way to work. Miss Adler was unable to ascertain whether the candy was an appetizer for breakfast or the breakfast itself.

Large Families. The children were all dirty and barefooted and there were a large number in each family. "These people have no knowledge of birth control," Miss Adler told of one young woman with whom she worked who has given birth to four children. Miss Adler asked her why she did not practice birth control. The young woman replied that she had considered it. She said she had seen advertisements in the drug store. Miss Adler advised her to say clear of these advertisements.

Miss Adler did not reveal her true identity to the people with whom she worked. She had been warned that if the girls found out that she was a social worker that they would not confide in her. She found the girls friendly and interesting. There seemed to be no distinction between the women. White and black women worked together although they usually separated at lunch time.

Some of the girls that worked in the laundry were described. One helped support her family. Her widowed mother was compelled to stay in bed because of arthritic veins. Another girl had left her home because her drunken father beat her. Miss Adler said that she did not blame her as she was eighteen and pretty. Still another girl was deformed because her father had kicked her when she was three years old injuring her spine. She spoke of her misfortune in a matter of fact way and seemed to have no hard feeling against her father.

Miss Adler found these girls to be very human and not at all soured on life. They all had beams and the most of them were engaged. Miss Adler had to become "engaged" in order to be admitted into their society.

Eighty at Forum. She receives letters from these girls. They have no idea whatever of university life, and ask about the place where she works and if she has a nice place to board.

The girls engaged in the industrial experiment received from three to twenty dollars per week. One girl was fired because she could not do the work required. Miss Adler hopes to make a similar investigation in other cities to see if the same conditions exist that she found in Chicago.

Eighty people were present at the meeting. The dining room of the Nebraska hotel was filled to capacity. Another meeting of the World Forum will be held next Wednesday according to present plans.

BENGTSON CONDUCTS NEW TYPE OF STUDY

Geography Students Go on Field Trips to Various Places in Lincoln

A new system of study is being inaugurated by the first year classes in general and economic geography this week. Field trips are being taken by the pupils to various parts of the city, the work being conducted by Dr. N. A. Bengtson and Prof. E. E. Lackey of the geography department.

The department has arranged with the Lincoln Traction company to furnish enough buses to accommodate the students. Each bus contains thirty students and is accompanied by an instructor. The party is being conducted upon a study basis, and the same vigilance is being exercised on the buses, both while in motion and at stops, as it is to be found in the classroom. A total of over three hundred students are making the trips, and sections are being conducted nearly every forenoon and afternoon of this week.

The entire trip will cover the territory within Lincoln and the districts adjacent on the west and on the south. In this manner, students are taught how to use maps in the field, how to recognize land forms and other features of the natural landscape, and to observe the relationships which exist between the natural land forms and utilization.

In the past, Nebraska has been noted for its emphasis on field work in geography. In this way there is a correlation between the theoretical and the practical in its study. This proves especially helpful in pointing out the direct economic relationships that exist between human activities and their environment. Largely due to their emphasis on field work, Nebraska alumni are now teaching in a number of leading colleges of the country.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers met Wednesday, Oct. 2, in room 102 of the mechanical engineering building for the purpose of starting a membership drive and appointing committees.

Prof. Leubs, the honorary chairman, gave a short talk on the work carried out last year. He urged that all the members pay their dues of $1 immediately so that their names could be sent in for subscriptions to the Mechanical Engineering Journal. He discussed the various awards for students of the mechanical engineering college.

The following committees were appointed: Social, Allen Meyer, chairman; Owen Williams, Richard Deveraux; publicity, Erickson, chairman; membership, Weyant, chairman; Roy Henry, Hengsther; library, James Thompson.

The officers for the coming year are: Prof. A. A. Leubs, honorary chairman; Raymond Prohaska, chairman; Charles Sharp, vice chairman; Shepherd Wolf, treasurer; Andrew Ziph, secretary.

TWO HUNDRED WOMEN EXPECTED AT DINNER

Big Sister Banquet Program Includes Readings, Music, Games and Dancing.

More than two hundred women are expected to attend the Big and Little Sister dinner to be held tonight at Memorial hall. Freshmen who have not yet found a big sister will be assigned one at that time, and anyone interested in big sister work should attend.

Because of the difficulty of finding the addresses and phone numbers of the new students, many of the big sisters have not become acquainted with their charges. All new women students are being urged to come to the dinner and to become acquainted with others, even if they have not been personally requested to attend the party.

An entertainment is to be furnished both during the dinner and afterward. An Alpha Phi duet with Eleanor Bessey at the piano will entertain during the dinner. Later there will be a reading and music, and games are to be played. Music will be provided for those who care to dance.

SWEZEY GIVES FIRST LECTURE TUESDAY NIGHT

Although cloudy skies precluded use of the telescope Tuesday night, twenty students heard a lecture on astronomy at the first bi-monthly open house at the university observatory.

In the lecture last night, Prof. Goodwin D. Swezey told the students of a number of the world's most famous telescopes, describing in particular the 100-inch telescope at the Mt. Wilson observatory. He also told briefly of the use of the telescope.

The open houses will be held the first and third Tuesdays of each month throughout the school year. Lectures on astronomy will be given at 8 o'clock, with observations being taken before and after the lecture when weather permits.

DEAN THOMPSON CLARIFIES RULE

Outside Work Hinders

These are health, such as illness and lack of enough proper food; finance, such as lack of money or too much outside work for obtaining money; and a lack of understanding of what is required and how it may be accomplished, especially true in the case of freshmen.

New students should not take too much outside work of any kind during the first year and it is better if they may keep out of it altogether, according to Dean Thompson. This applies to the remaining years of a student's university life as well, but especially to the first year. This fact is brought home to the parents of new students in 2,000 letters recently sent out by the student affairs office.

University Rule.

Following is an extract of the university rule concerning absence from classes: "1. Whenever a freshman has a number of absences equal to the credit hours in a course (except one hour courses which allow two, and two hour courses which allow three) this office (student affairs office) will send him a notice requesting that he apply to the instructor for permission to continue the course. This permission must then be voiced by the student's adviser and filed in this office."

"2. When students other than freshmen have a number of absences equal to twice the credit hours in a course, this office (student affairs) will send him a notice which he will handle in the same manner as that indicated in section 1 above. If the student does not continue or is not permitted to continue the course, the usual drop slip should be filed at once in the registrar's office by the student. It is understood that the above does not apply to absences excused by the dean of the student's college, the dean of student affairs, or the dean of women."
