TWO FOOTBALL MEN RECEIVE INJURIES

suffered some internal injuries from his crushed chest. A hemorrhage, first thought serious, was checked before much blood was lost. The entire varsity squad was going through dummy tackle practice when the supports fell. Feiber Mansdam was the first man to hit it. Right after him came Broadstone and Peterson. Impetus of the two hitting the dummy together caused the supports to snap off at the base. Peterson received most of the shock as the side he struck was cracked two weeks ago. A temporary brace had been put in place but was broken by the force of impact.

Pandemonium reigned on the stadium field for several moments after the accident. Fellow players lifted the supports from the injured men. The telephone branch line, discontinued because of Armistice day, necessitated running to a residence phone some distance away and caused a delay in getting the ambulance. Dr. Oliver Everett is attending both men.

ever, and is the same as it has been for the last three years, he said. Pictures may be taken at either Hauck's or Townsend's studios. Both are photographing as fast as possible, according to Bailey. He advised as many as possible to get down to the studios in the mornings of the first part of the week suggesting that they might avoid the last minute rush in this manner. Several hundred bills bearing a warning of the approaching picture deadline were printed and distributed about the campus Monday. Among the explanatory material contained in the bill was the striking phrase: "Are you proud to be a Cornhusker? Then you want your picture in Nebraska's Annual Memory book." Work Progressing. "Work on the Cornhusker is a month ahead of last year at this time. Because of this we hope to get the annual out a month early," stated Bailey. "The opening section is all ready for the press and all we need now is the co-operation of the student. This section will be printed in four colors.
