Blues Stage Comeback.

The Blues tried to stage a comeback in the same quarter when Bob Manley, quarter, returned Frahm's kickoff fifty yards to the Reds' forty-four yard line. A march down the field ended too soon to be of any material good, and the Blues went screless for the period. In the second quarter, when they held the wind advantage, the Blues' gain failed to pen-cirate far into the Redshirts' area.

Another Red touchdown was narrowly averted in the third quarter, when the team marched up to the Blues' ten yard line twice, only to fall back. The advance in this period was led by Frahm and Red Young, with Young showing more dash and fire than in any other game of the spring period.

Frahm Crosses Line.

The final Red touchdown in the last period came after Big Boy rahm had clicked off several runs in succession ranging from five to twenty-five yards.
