Lewis Swingler, Negro Youth From Tulsa, Makes Way Through School; Had Only $30 When Left Oklahoma

By REX WAGNER.

With scarcely a dollar to his name but with an unconquerable ambition to acquire an education in spite of great odds against him, Lewis Swingler, of Tulsa, Okla., a negro student enrolled in the school of journalism of the University of Nebraska, launched upon his college career in September of 1926. Swingler had graduated from the Tulsa negro high school the preceding June.

Because of lack of finances he had not planned to enter college in the fall but had intended to wait and matriculate the second semester after he had worked and saved some money. A friend who has since graduated from the University of Nebraska asked Swingler to go to Lincoln with him and the congregation of the negro church of which Swingler was a member, learning of his ambition to attend college, raised $30 and gave it to him.

With this $30, a desire for an education and a will to work, Swingler set out for Lincoln. Half of his financial assets were swallowed up in railroad fare and after he had paid room rent for two weeks he had exactly 50 cents left.

Worked for Fees.

Immediately he went to work. He got a job shining shoes in the Y. M. C. A. It was two weeks before school would start and in that time he was able to scrape enough together to pay his matriculation and tuition fees. He explained that the state fair was being held in Lincoln during this time and business was especially brisk.

MISSISSIPPI TEAM NEARLY WINS CHICAGO AWARD

Meat Judgers of Missouri Edge Out Nebraskans by 19 Point Lead.

Nebraska's girl meat judging team came within 19 points of bringing back the Chicago trophy for keeps. Prof. William J. Loeffel, head of the agricultural college reported when he arrived in Lincoln from the contest. Missouri won with a team score of 2250. Nebraska's score was 2240.

Eva Buel of Hickman was the high individual judge of the contest with a score of 797 of a possible 900 points. Miss Buel was first on beef, tied for fourth on lamb, and won on pork judging. The official judges said she was the most outstanding judge of beef they had ever seen. She placed two of the three classes correctly and received two 49's out of a possible 50 on her three sets of reasons on beef.

Other Members Lower.

Annie Brackett of Lincoln and Christine Carlson of Lincoln were the other two members of the team. They were tenth on pork and tenth on lamb, respectively. The team as a whole was second in judging beef and lamb, and third in judging pork. The girls had fifteen correct placements out of a possible twenty-seven.

In the Chicago contest the girls were required to judge two classes of beef carcasses, two of beef cuts, one of pork carcasses, two of pork cuts, and two of lamb carcasses. They had to write reasons on all of these classes and were given ten minutes for reasons on each class. Nineteen had entered the 1930 contest. One of them was from Ontario, Canada. In the five years that meat judging contests have been held in Chicago, Nebraska has been first twice, second once, third once, and ninth the other time. Three of the five teams have been made up of home economics students of the agricultural college. Other states enter college men in this contest.

DORMITORY PLAN IS OPPOSED BY BARB STUDENTS

Nonfraternity Men Fearful Of Being Curbed by House Rules.

THREE FAVOR PROGRAM

Thomas Believes Structures Will Aid Non-Greeks Politically.

An inquiry made yesterday indicated that many barbs are opposed to dormitory building. Out of twenty non-fraternity men interviewed but three favored the plan. George Thomas '33, Nebraska City, who is enrolled in the school of journalism favors the plan because he believed it would make it easier for the barbs to organize politically.

George Dunn, a sophomore in the school of journalism from Omaha, also favors dormitories, providing the same rules are applied to upperclassmen as are now enforced in fraternities. Aaron Niebaum, Nickerson, a sophomore in the college of agriculture stated that he believed the plan was a good one.

Many Opposed.

All other barbs interviewed were opposed to the plan. The reason most of them gave was that they believed dormitory regulations would infringe upon the present state of independence. John C. Central, senior in the college of engineering from Fullerton, declared he was very much opposed to dormitories. His reason was that he would not care to have his life regulated by dormitory rules.

James Fulton, Hebron, a sophomore in the college of business administration declared, "I think dormitory building is the most idiotic scheme the university has yet conceived." His reasons for opposing dormitories were that he did not like the idea of being governed by rules and he was perfectly satisfied with conditions as they now are.

Fears Hardship.

John Sullivan, Roca, a junior in arts and science college opposes the policy of dormitory building. "I'm decidedly against any plan which might limit the present liberties of barbs," he emphatically declared. He also said that he had worked for his room and he believed any regulation requiring students to live in dormitories would work a hardship upon many students.
