VOGELER DRAWS UP PLANS FOR SWIMMING POOL

Intramural Director Will Carry Proposal To Burnett Today.

GISH AND LEE APPROVE

Coach Outlines Financing Plan Hinging Upon Bond Issue.

Possibilities that a thorough outline of plans, financing arrangements, maintenance costs, and revenues of a swimming pool for the University of Nebraska would be presented to Chancellor E. A. Burnett for his approval loomed today.

Late yesterday, Rudolph F. Vogeler, director of intramural athletics, declared that, after a careful investigation, he had drawn up an outline, and expected to present it to the chancellor today. If he does, he declared, he will be accompanied by H. D. Gish, director of athletics, and Miss Mabel Lee, head of the department of physical education for women.

Provides Diving Boards. Vogeler said that his tentative sketch provided for a pool 35x75 feet, ranging in depth from 3 1/2 to 11 feet. High and low board diving would be provided for, and 1,000 spectators could be accommodated.

Vogeler estimated the revenue that could be derived from the pool at slightly more than $6,000 per year. Upkeep, including chemicals, and a life guard would be less than $1,000, he believes.

Outlines Financing. He will also outline to the chancellor a financing plan hinging on a bond issue. Changes necessary in previous plans in order to build a pool suitable for use by both men and women also will be recommended to the chancellor.

Mr. Vogeler finished drawing up his outline of plans for the pool following a visit to four pools in Omaha, on which he was accompanied by John K. Selleck, secretary of student activities. The technical high school, a 30x75 foot affair, which cost $40,000 to build when prices were higher. They also saw the pool at Father Flanagan's home, which has a special acoustic plaster on the ceiling to prevent sounds from reverberating constantly thru the pool room.

MAY AWGWAN WILL BE FACULTY NUMBER

Kelly Urges Contributors To Develop Material Around Theme.

TO APPEAR ON APRIL 29

The May issue of the Awgwan will be released about April 29 and will be the Faculty Number according to Robert Kelly, editor. In a statement yesterday he urged contributors of art and editorial matter to develop this theme particularly.

"We would like to have contributions from students in every college in the university," he stated, "because in that way only can the humor be representative. Short humorous quips, complimentary or otherwise, about members of the faculty are especially desired."

Stipulations in the contract with the printers require that all copy be in before spring vacation. The magazine will probably be released on the campus on Wednesday, April 29, the day preceding Ivy Day. All contributors are invited to use the Awgwan exchanges in the Awgwan office at any time.

Sale of the April issue was very satisfactory. Copies are still available at the book stores and at down town news stands according to Edgar Backus, business manager. More copies were printed this month than previously.

MILLER CHOOSES KIGER FOR PART IN KOSMET SHOW

Omaha Student Takes Part Of Society Matron in Spring Play.

KLUB BOOKS HASTINGS

Organization Schedules May 1 and 2 for Lincoln Presentations.

Stanley Kiger, Omaha, has been selected for the role of Mrs. Paige, society matron and mother of Jane, the heroine, one of the leading parts in "High and Dry," Kosmet Klub musical comedy, Lowell "Jiggs" Miller, director of the production, announced yesterday.

Kiger is a junior in the college of business administration, member of Sigma Nu fraternity and of Pershing rifles and formerly sang in the Great Cathedral choir.

Plans Matrimonial Venture. Mrs. Paige, a widow and withering social flower, has definite plans for the matrimonial ventures of her daughter. In fact she has maneuvered Jane into accepting Albert, a social lion, when Tom, hero and captain of the ship on which they set out for a pleasure voyage, appears.

Mrs. Paige objects to Jane running around with sailors because of their morals and tattoos. In the end, of course, true love has its way and Jane and Tom are brought together when the whole party is left on a desert isle by a surprise mutiny of the crew.

Her one weakness is Albert, a novelist, with whom her kitchiness carrying on lead to an engagement.

Book Hastings. Hastings, home town of William T. McCleery, author of the show, is the only booking made as yet on the road trip planned for the production during the spring recess. The comedy will be shown at the city auditorium there Monday, April.

Stanley Day, business manager of the Klub, says that negotiations are now underway for three other bookings which he intends to announce soon.

The show will be brought back to Lincoln following the road trip and shown at the Liberty theater May 1 and 2. The Lincoln showing at that time will permit alumni who return for Ivy day to see the production.

COMMITTEE FINISHES PLANS FOR ROUND UP

Registration For Annual Alumni Gathering To Start On June 5.

Plans for Round Up week entertainment lasting for two days have been completed, according to Ray Ramsay, alumni association secretary, with the exception of events for Friday night.

The entertainment will begin June 5 with registration and informal class reunions in the coliseum, which will serve as general headquarters during the two day jubilee of returned alumni. Friday noon has been set aside for a general alumni luncheon also in the coliseum.

Can Play Golf. Friday afternoon entertainment will be more or less left to individuals, according to Ramsay, but facilities have been provided for conducted tours of state institutions. Golf clubs will be open to students who wish to play golf, and the state capitol will be open for inspection tours, as will other state and city establishments. Guides will be provided in the afternoon for inspection of the campus, and informal meetings with faculty members will be a feature of the entertainment.

The alumni association council and the executive committee will also meet the afternoon of June 5, in addition to the planned entertainments for the day.

Friday evening events have not yet been definitely determined, but announcement of plans for the evening probably will be made within a week or ten days, Ramsay stated. The preceding evening, Thursday, June 4, has been left open for sorority and fraternity functions honoring the returned alumni, as most of the societies the planning to hold their functions at that time.

The morning of June 5 will be devoted to class breakfasts before commencement, with the graduation exercises to be held later in the morning at the coliseum.

"We are expecting a large number of former Nebraskans," Ramsay stated, "and plans for their entertainment during the two day jubilee have progressed satisfactorily."

LEGISLATURE FAVORS BORROWING PROJECT

Bill To Authorize Regents In Use Of Endowment Funds Advances.

TO BUILD DORMITORIES

Efforts of the board of regents to secure permission from the legislature to borrow from public school endowment funds for the erection of dormitories were given support yesterday when the state senate advanced H. R. 239 to third reading. This bill authorizes the regents to borrow the money.

It was passed after some opposition and after two amendments had been tacked on which limits the securities, the state board of education can buy in investing school endowment funds. These amendments had no bearing on the University's dormitory measure.

Board Not Forced.

Senators speaking in favor of the bill pointed out that the board would not be required to lend its money to the regents for the erection of dormitories. It was also pointed out that the university could borrow money from other sources but such a practice would only cause greater expense to students who will live in the dormitories and whose fees will pay for bonds.

Another development in the legislature yesterday affecting the University was the heated attack by Senator Pitzer's curtailed budget. Senator Pitzer particularly objected to the legislature's spending $600,000 for the completion of the state capitol and "in the same breath denying the needs of our children."

Observer Catches Pair In Unguarded Moment On Sunny Afternoon.

BY THE OBSERVER.

How would you act in a situation like this, or, to put it tersely, how are you coming with such positions? Spring has an elevating and inspiring effect on the barometer of human emotions. The temperature, trees, birds, and strange ideas, catapult our thoughts to—well, what is the young man in the picture doing anyway?

Hector and Adelaide, as we may as well call them, are in a promising position. At least promises seem to be just around the tree stump and that is the unfortunate aspect of the whole thing. Promises are easily made. Hector is perked with human anguish and despair. He wants to make love but is afraid she won't like it. Adelaide too is wrenched by mental grief. She likes to make love but is afraid he won't want to. (Continued on Page 3.)
