POOL PLAN WILL GO TO REGENTS NEXT SATURDAY

Gunderson and Thompson Consider Idea for the Presentation.

GISH, VOGELER FAVOR IT

Chancellor Declines Say If Will Recommend to Board or Not.

Plans for construction of a swimming pool in the coliseum, as presented by the athletic committee to the chancellor Saturday, rested yesterday in the hands of L. E. Gunderson, finance secretary, and T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs.

After an examination of the plans by these officials, they will be presented to the board of regents at their meeting Saturday, the chancellor said yesterday afternoon. He advised that he can not say whether or not he will recommend the plan to the board until he receives the report of Gunderson and Thompson.

The plan calls for an expenditure of between thirty and thirty-five hundred dollars for the construction of a 37 by 75 foot pool under the main stage of the coliseum.

Fees to Pay Upkeep.

According to the figures shown by supporters of the plan drawn up by Rudy Vogeler, director of intramural athletics, and Herb Gish, athletic director, the registration fees of students in swimming classes would pay the upkeep cost of the pool in addition to paying off bonds issued for its construction within seven years.

Vogeler estimates that registration revenue would be about $6,000 while the maintenance, including chemicals and life guard would be $1,000. The university now pays about $1,500 annually for the use of down town pools for regular swimming classes, this not including the cost for use of such pools by varsity swimming teams.

Opponents of the plan say that there will be difficulty in selling the bonds, while those favoring it suggest the possibility of the construction company which gets the construction contract buying the entire issue.

BOY SCOUTS WORK ON PLANS FOR EXPOSITION

Prof. E. W. Lantz Will Be One of Officials in Charge Games.

Presenting the most complete exposition of scouting ever offered in Lincoln, all members of the organization within the Cornhusker scout area are hard at work on the eighteen events to be offered in the coliseum Saturday evening.

Included in the list of officials who are directing the big show is Prof. E. W. Lantz who has charge of the scout games. Scouting aims to perfect a balanced program in which both work and play have their rightful amount of attention.

Within the two and a half hour program, every part of scouting is to be exhibited. Arnold Folsom's Lincoln troop is also scheduled to clown every act in some manner. One of this troop's duties is to demonstrate how each event shouldn't be done. In addition, some very good comedy numbers have been worked up for the program.

Olsen Directs Act.

The grand climax of the show will come with the exhibition of scout pioneering and camping. This is the very heart of all scout activities. Among the activities will be the construction of a sus-

Nebraskan Reporter Gets Mixed Up With Monsters, Trematodes In an Interview in Bessey Hall

BY DOROTHY SCHWEDTFFER.

How would you like to receive a package containing a live rattlesnake through the mail with no label warning you of its contents?

That is exactly what happened to one of the professors in the Zoology department a few years ago. Well it didn't bite him so the story has a happy ending. Nevertheless, the department is still receiving packages and to most people their contents would be anything but objects of delight or Christmas surprises. Just recently Dr. Whitney received a live scorpion from a former Nebraska student who is now in Mexico.

Full of Surprises.

Bessey Hall is full of surprises. Dr. Wolcott was approached and asked the possibilities of finding a "story" lying loose around the department of interest to Daily Nebraskan readers. He stated that Professor Wade had received four very nice moles a few days ago.

A student in the department delayed the reporter and explained that he had some personal friends he'd like to have her meet. Unsuspectingly the reporter followed him into an evil smelling room filled with glass bottles, wicked looking instruments and what have you. It was then the reporter was shown (under a microscope) the whole Trematode family. There were short Trematodes and long

APPROPRIATIONS BILL CAUSES MIX IN LEGISLATURE

Proposals From Passage to Adjournment Are Made By Senators.

Appropriations proceedings in the legislature went into a more beautiful tangle than ever yesterday afternoon as the senate began work on the Bryan budget. Proposals as to the disposal of the measure ranged from indefinite postponement to passage without amendment, while several of the upper house solons questioned the validity of considering the bill at all.

Leading the fight against the bill as it had come over from the house after last week's freak vote, Wheery of Pawnee City said the measure before the house was "nothing but a scrap of paper," that the house had failed to pass the substitute measure reported by its finance committee and had never voted on the original Bryan budget.

Reed Says New Bill

Reed of Henderson declared that the bill before the senate was neither Bryan's original budget nor the substitute bill which failed in the house. He said there are fifty-two items on the bill which came to the senate that were not on Bryan's measure. He opposed either killing or advancing the bill, but said the senate could safely take the blame for raising expenditures since the necessary state activities could not be carried on under the appropriations of the Bryan budget.

Wellensiek of Grand Island held that the validity of the measure before the senate was a matter for the house to decide and did not concern the senate. When someone said that passage of the present bill would bring a flood of litigation on the question whether or not the legislature had passed an appropriations bill at all, he replied that the house had sent the bill over as the one to which it had given its approval and that the senate was bound to consider it as such.

Offers Amendments.

Chairman Reed of the senate finance committee offered the house committee amendments which failed to get the required votes.

'Bud' Bailey Has Difficult Task Assuming Feminine Mannerisms as Heroine of 'High and Dry' Show

BY JACK ERICKSON.

"You never can tell what a woman will do next!"

Thus goes the old adage which is so popular among men, adhered to largely because they must have some excuse for the inability to figure their feminine friends out. In keeping with this maxim it is not hard to understand the problem which confronts Byron "Bud" Bailey, who is attempting to develop a pair of deceptive eyes and an elusive figure in order that he may perfectly render his leading feminine role in the 1931 Kosmet show, "High and Dry."

According to "Bud" it is no small job to be a man all your life and then suddenly turn woman, and do a good job of it. Not only is it a task to adapt oneself to the exceedingly uncertain feminine mannerisms, but it is also a gargantuan (notice that) labor to squeeze into a ladies wearing apparel each evening before rehearsal. Although the masculine belief still holds, everyone connected with the show is ready to agree that one must be duly careful in getting into that "but very little," or the dainties may rip.

Bailey is Heroine.

Mr. Bailey, as the debonaire heroine, Miss Jean Paige, does some excellent bits of "love life" in the musical comedy. He first falls in love and becomes engaged to the villain, and then, with a desire to really do things up right, breaks off on that score and immediately proceeds to become the fiance of

PLAYERS BEGIN WEEK'S RUN OF SEASON'S FINAL

Drinkwater's 'Bird in Hand' Is Dramatic Group's Fourth Comedy.

SHRAMEK, LERNER LEAD

Play Tells Old Story of Struggles Between Generations.

By ROSELINE PIZER.

The final production of the University Players' season is a clever, a very clever comedy. "Bird in Hand" has all of the witty humor that one would expect from the author of "Abraham Lincoln" and "Oliver Cromwell" John Drinkwater.

The carefully chosen cast works together harmoniously in presenting an extremely finished performance which is a fitting climax to a most successful season.

De Lellis Shramek makes a charming and most attractive young ingenue. Miss Shramek plays the part of the inn-keeper's daughter who has a will exactly like her stubborn father's. The stubborn wills are alright until they start to clash and then they lead to everything from a lawyer's intervention to a highly entertaining bedroom scene which, incidentally depicts the evolution of wearing apparel.

Lerner is Stubborn Inn-Keeper.

W. Zolley Lerner is the stubborn irate old inn-keeper who can't quite see his daughter marrying the son of the family "his brother was coachman to." Mr. Lerner who is always at his best in character parts, is a highly entertaining figure and gets the most out of the part.

Dorsel Jaeke as the sympathetic youthful mother fits into her part well and plays it charmingly. William F. Thompson is one of the guests at the inn and helps the love plot in the story along in a very entertaining fashion. Mr. Thompson is traveling for a sardine company—this week—in fact, he travels with the sardines. He always carries a can in his coat tail.

Yenne Gets Lawyer's Part.

Herbert Yenne is the meticulous bachelor lawyer who does his bit which is quite a bit to help the love affair along. Mr. Yenne's idea of the way one should prepare for his nightly rest is one of the

M'BRIDE SELECTS NET TEAM BY TOURNEY

Mario or McKim Will Play Durisch for Place on Tennis Squad.

Gregg McBride is slowly selecting his tennis squad for the coming year, with four regulars from last year available. It is improbable that any newcomers will be given much of a chance for competition.

This year a new plan is being used, in that the four veterans are to be used as the nucleus of the aggregation, and three additional squad members are being selected by weekly tournaments.

In the first of three tournaments, of which the winner is to be awarded a place on the competing squad, Durisch bracketed the finals in the upper bracket by defeating Friedrich and Fishbaugh, Mario, a Phillipino student, plays in the semifinals against McKim. The winner of this match will play Durisch to see which player is selected for the number five position on the representative team. The second tournament starts today.
