REGENTS FAVOR SWIMMING POOL PLANS—BURNETT

1,100 Students Petition In One Day Agreeing To $1 Added Fee.

PLAN FOR LEGAL PROBE

Investigation Of Financing Scheme Is Under Way Towards Report.

Members of the board of regents expressed themselves as generally in favor of the proposed swimming pool plans as presented to them at their meeting Saturday, E. A. Burnett, chancellor of the university, revealed yesterday. However, Chancellor Burnett declared that no discussion of financing plans was conducted at the Saturday meeting.

They favored the proposed $1 per semester swimming pool fee, for which more than 1,100 students petitioned in a single day, although the board did not consider whether or not the pool could be financed on that basis, Chancellor Burnett reported.

Plan Investigation.

He declared that a complete and thorough investigation of the legal aspects of the swimming pool financing plan as proposed last week already was under way, as was a probe of the other phases of the plan. The regents will consider a report from the investigators when they meet in about three or four weeks.

In explaining the delay necessitated by the investigations, the chancellor also added that the board wished to thoroughly examine the university's own financial position before it officially went on record as favoring the construction of the pool. He also indicated that certain members of the board wished to have the budget in their hands before they considered other matters of expenditure.

Although a delay will be occasioned by the investigations and the wait for the budget, prospects for a swimming pool looked brighter today than at any time past, with the regents more or less openly favoring the proposal.

A University of Nebraska instructor, Miss Matilda Peters, has been appointed as one of the five judges in the annual meat essay contest sponsored by the National Livestock and Meat board. Miss Peters is the acting head of the home economics department on the agricultural college campus. She received her notification this week and accepted immediately.

The work which Miss Peters has done in meat cookery in co-operation with Prof. William J. Loeffel of the animal husbandry department and several research workers of the United States department of agriculture is said to be outstanding in the country. Professor Loeffel has made a study of the meat and carcasses of hogs, cattle and sheep fed in experimental work at the Nebraska experiment station. Miss Peters has continued the study by cooking the meat and submitting it to a committee of men and women who pass judgment upon it.

KOSMET CHORUS

Here is the pony chorus of "High and Dry," University of Nebraska Kosmet Klub show which was produced in Hastings April 20 and will show in Lincoln, May 1 and 2. It is the chorus—minus three. They weren't left out intentionally but it just happened that six clocks were all that were necessary in this particular number so three men were out.

The clocks are all set at three bells. When you see "High and Dry" you will realize why this is part of an early number, sort of. The time pieces, however, are used in a very clever dance which is one of the big features of the show.

900 Hastings Citizens Desert Radios To See 'Home Town' McCleery's Play

By JACK ERICKSON.

The game is done, we've won, we've won.

Quoth they and whistled thrice! Although the foregoing bit of rhyme is practically an open and shut case of plagiarism from Coleridge's "Rime of an Ancient Mariner," it has been adapted to fit the sections of Kosmet Klub members following the presentation of "High and Dry" in the Hastings city auditorium, Monday evening.

It seems that 900 good citizens of Hastings and the surrounding territory turned off their radios and turned out to see associated Kosmet Klub staff and cast go into mutiny, isles of adventure, and tempests of love on the local stage as they rendered "High and Dry" in a splendid fashion. The captain and crew of the play consider this a true tribute to their efforts, and an appreciation of their long trek from Lincoln by special train.

Have Special Car. The special car and baggage department which transported "High and Dry" comedians and their scenic equipment left Lincoln at about noon Monday accompanied by Dean T. J. Thompson and Professor E. S. Schramm. At the beginning of the tour Kosmet Klub gave each tourist one dollar upon which the day's gastronomic satisfactions were to be based. On a spur of inspiration some of the cast members spent the entire sum early in the day and starved for the rest of the trip. Others spent sparingly, even cautiously, awed by the possession of such a lump sum all to wunt.

Nate Levy, one of the cast comedians, is supposed to have spent his dollar entirely for salted almonds. This is more than an idle rumor, in fact some say they saw him buy the nuts. Others attest that he had other food in addition to the almonds and the only conclusion to be drawn is that he must have had another food resource.

MORRILL HALL PITTS EXHIBITS ON DISPLAY

Abyssinian Paintings Done By Native Form Part Of Collection.

Three exhibitions, placed on display in the Morrill hall art galleries at the University of Nebraska last week, will be retained until May 1, according to announcement made by the school of fine arts.

Five Abyssinian paintings by a native artist exhibited in the third floor corridor of Morrill hall belong to M. J. Sorenson, who is teaching at Union college here while on furlough from service in the mission field for the Seventh Day Adventist church in Abyssinia. These paintings, while crude, depict native life and reveal curious beliefs and legends of the Abyssinians.

They were purchased by Mr. Sorenson, who has spent eight years in Abyssinia, just before sailing for the United States. No attempt has been made by the artist to individualize his subjects. Only by shade of the complexion can one judge whether they represent handsome or ugly persons. The darker the complexion, the less claim subject has to beauty, according to the Abyssinian artist.

Watercolors by Nile Jurgen Behncke, director of the Oshkosh public museum, are on view in Gallery A of Morrill hall. These paintings show a fine sense of color in subjects drawn largely from landscape and small town life.

The third exhibition is of fifty outstanding advertisement proofs which are being shown in Gallery B of Morrill hall. These were first displayed last fall by the Art Directors club at the Art Center, New York City, and since have been circulated as a traveling exhibition of the Art Center. The exhibition aims to explain the work of the art director and to show he functions as a creator of advertising material.
