During all that promising activity in the hours of getting out votes, both the Blue Shirt and the Yellow Jacket parties have kept their eyes constantly fixed on the last eight counted accurately, in the top position of their plans and programs.

Explaining why the Yellow Jacket faction decided to hold a rally at the Sorority Houses, Blue Shirt candidate Ralph May declared that the Blue Shirt must meet a yellow jacket and a Republican in the November election. He was not sure if the Blue Shirt would be able to defend itself publicly, but he was sure that the Blue Shirt would be active because of the last election.

Meanwhile, Yellow Jacket candidates were busy at the Sorority Houses, where they held a rally to discuss their plans for the future of the University of Nebraska. They also discussed ways to increase their voting strength in the upcoming election.
