UNIVERSITY PLAYERS TO PRESENT 'LADIES OF JURY' WEDNESDAY

Special Showing Of Comedy
By Fred Ballard Will Be At Temple.

Dramatic Scholarship Fund
To Be Established
With Proceeds.

A special showing of "Ladies of the Jury," rollicking comedy written by Fred Ballard, will be given for summer students at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Temple theater by the University Players, according to an announcement today by Miss Alice Howell, director of the dramatic group. The comedy, when it was presented last February, is being given as a feature of the recreational program as outlined by the student executive committee.

A scholarship fund for students in the dramatic department will be established with the proceeds received from the special showing. In order to aid in the establishment of such a fund all those taking part in the play have donated their time and the theater and all equipment will also be donated. At the request of Fred Ballard, Nebraska graduate, the publishing company will co-operate by donating the royalty to the new fund. Tickets will be sold at thirty-five cents plus additional amount that the individual may wish to give toward the establishment of the scholarship.

As many of the original cast as possible will take part in the play Wednesday evening. Miss De Lellis Shramek will return from David City and Miss Mildred Bickley from Omaha to take their parts as members of the jury. Where it is impossible for members of the original cast to return, their places will be taken by other members of University Players or by summer students. Selections will be announced in the next issue of The Nebraskan.

The three act comedy, which was acclaimed as one of the most popular plays given by the University Players last season, deals in a humorous manner with the influence which a society matron has upon a mixed jury. The star role is that of this society leader in a New Jersey town who, with five other women, becomes half

Bonediggers Hunt Fossil Graveyards On Skeleton Search

This summer promises to be an active one in the "elephant graveyard" of this country with scientists from all parts flocking to Nebraska to excavate for fossils. The Niobrara river country in the northwest part of the state will be the scene of major operations.

A group of scientists from the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History will search for bones of mammals that roamed the Nebraska plains in the Miocene age, estimated at over 10,000,000 years ago. Elmer S. Biggs, associate curator of the Field museum, is in charge of the tour. Marshall Field of New York is sponsoring the expedition.

Nebraskans themselves will be in the field searching for fossils. As in previous years, excavators from the geological department of the University of Nebraska will take to the field to find new specimens for Morrill hall which already has some of the choicest of the Agate Springs quarry fields.

Nebraska has more elephants buried within its boundaries than human bodies in the belief of Dr. E. H. Barbour of the University of Nebraska.

During the past winter reports of findings of fossils in all sections of the state were made to the museum of the university. Many of these finds will be excavated this summer.

Who will move to Omaha to become director of the Joslyn Memorial. Professor Grumann, director of the school of fine arts and professor of dramatic literature, has been with the university since 1900.

LANDSCAPING WORK IS COMMENCED AT MEMORIAL STADIUM

Work preliminary to construction of sidewalks to Nebraska's Memorial stadium and landscaping of the grounds at the east of the stadium began Monday under the direction of the university alumni association.

The work is being done under the association's direction and will be paid for out of its funds. Between $8,000 and $9,000 probably will be expended in putting the east approach to the stadium in shape, Mr. Ramsay said.

The old university drill field, between Social Sciences and Bessey hall, the Teachers college and Andrews hall, which is to be made into a mall whenever state appropriations permit, will be partially graded down to a level and the dirt removed used for fills in front of the stadium.

After the filling work is done, great sidewalks will be built. The main north and south sidewalk running past the stadium will be widened and walks will be built to the main entrance of the stadium.

The grounds will be landscaped with appropriate trees and shrubs. This work will also be done by the Memorial association.

HARTFORD, Conn. Someone beside the faculty may have received a severe shock when examinations in Hartford public high school were started. On the very eve of the examinations, the principal discovered his office safe had been forced and the examination papers taken—that is, enough to make it certain someone might have the list in advance. The faculty worked all night on new papers which were ready by the time the tests started.

Small Boys Would Enjoy Watching Teachers Puzzle Over Summer Exams

Small boys who squirmed under the persistent questioning of their teachers last winter would enjoy visiting classes at the University of Nebraska this summer. They would find 1,687 teachers busy taking examinations and writing lengthy papers on hot afternoons in the pursuit of advanced study during the vacation period.

For the majority of students now taking work at the university are teachers who taught school during the past year, according to registration figures released today by R. D. Moritz, director of the summer session. Of the 2,713 persons now enrolled, 1,687 are of this group. Those who attended school during the regular session number 916, while the remaining 110 were engaged in various occupations.

Students who are under contract to teach this fall total 1,610. Of the remainder, 752 will continue their studies in the university. These figures are being compiled

GRUMMANN BECOMES DIRECTOR OF JOSLYN MEMORIAL AT OMAHA

Director of School of Fine
Arts With University
Since 1900.

Chairman of Convocations
For 20 Years; Edited
Many Publications.

Paul H. Grumann, director of the school of fine arts and professor of dramatic literature at the University of Nebraska, has accepted a position as director of the Joslyn Memorial at Omaha, it was learned Wednesday by university officials. His resignation has not been presented to the university administrative authorities and no steps have been taken to fill the vacancy.

"I regret very much to see Professor Grumann leave the University of Nebraska," stated Chancellor E. A. Burnett today. "It means the loss to the university of one of its able administrative executives, to say nothing of the loss of a teacher of the caliber of Professor Grumann who has spent his past thirty years in our service. As director of the school of fine arts Professor Grumann has done excellent work. The school of fine arts has achieved a recognized standing of leadership in the middlewest. The regents had tendered him the position of dean of the fine arts group but the inducements presented by the Joslyn Memorial were such that he thought it best to accept."

Professor Grumann, who has been with the University of Nebraska since 1900, is a native of Indianapolis where he received his preliminary training, graduating from Indiana University in 1896, and receiving his A. M. degree in 1900. His first teaching position was at Butler University from which he resigned to accept a position.

End of Session.

A travel-study course thru the Rocky mountains beginning at the close of the nine weeks term under the direction of the department of geography and extension division, is announced today by E. E. Similar trips have been conducted by the department during the past two years and students have found them most entertaining as well as instructive. Special chartered busses are used and rest days and night stops are planned so that students will not become tired.

Leaving Lincoln on August 6, the tour will include the North Platte valley, Goshen Hole, Casper, Big Horn basin, Yellowstone National park, Snake River valley of southeastern Idaho and Salt Lake. After remaining in Salt Lake City a day, they will return thru southern Wyoming, Estes Park and southern Nebraska. The trip will be completed with the return to Lincoln on August 26.

Estimated expense for the tour will be about $140, including tuition. Professor Lackey reports that there is room for a few more registrants, but that applications must be made before July 15 at room 103 A, former museum, or by writing Professor Lackey at that address.
