STUDENT COUNCIL GIVES INNOCENTS RALLY CONTROL

Art Mitchell Outlines Plan for Pep Demonstrations Contemplated.

CONSIDER CHICAGO TRIP

Railroad Quotes Special Excursion Rates to Northwestern.

That all rallies for the coming football season should be controlled by the Innocents Society was decided by the Student Council at a meeting held last night in U. Hall. Art Mitchell, representing the Innocents, presented a tentative schedule of rallies, and his position for control by the Innocents was granted.

The Innocents Society is planning three major rallies during the season and more send-off rallies. "The send-off rallies are of great importance to the team starting off for a game," Mitchell declared. The following schedule of rallies, tentatively arranged, was presented by Mitchell at the meeting: South Dakota game—Corn Cob and Tassel rally; Northwestern game—a send-off rally at the station Thursday night; Oklahoma game—a gathering at the Armory or some similar meeting place, and address by a speaker, and a march to the hotel for speeches by the visiting team and coaches; Kansas game—a homecoming banquet; Missouri game—a send-off rally; Iowa game—a Corn Cob and Tassel rally.

Mitchell announced that group stunts, something new at rallies, would be tried at the railroad station at the send-off rally for the Northwestern game. The new cheerleaders will be present at that time also. Nothing has been definitely planned for the Pittsburgh game because a great number of students will have gone home for Thanksgiving vacation.

Prof. E. W. Lantz, faculty advisor to the Student Council, said that if the rallies were carried on with the same spirit as last year, they should be very successful.

The following committees were appointed by Edwin Faulkner, president of the council. By-law revision committee—Phil Brown.

More subscriptions to the Daily Nebraskan have been sold during the annual campaign this year than had been sold last year at the same period of the sales drive, according to Jack Thompson, business manager of the publication.

Fraternity and sorority houses have responded unusually well. Thompson declares, although a few laggard groups are being solicited before the end of the drive this Saturday.

"The entire campus has responded well," the business manager said, "and appreciation is due both faculty members and students for their hearty co-operation in the support of a leading campus enterprise."

The drive for subscriptions closes this week end, and all students, faculty members and organizations are urged to get their subscriptions in by that time.

GOBS, TASSELS WILL ROUSE SPIRIT FRIDAY

Pep Groups Plan Pre-Game Demonstration for South Dakota.

INNOCENTS IN CHARGE

A house-to-house rally by Corn Cobs and Tassels, men's and women's pep organizations, planned for Friday evening at dinner time, it was announced today by Art Mitchell of the Innocents society, rally chairman.

The Corn Cobs plan to present a short program at each sorority house, starting with the outlying residences and working down to those on the campus last. Music and songs will be included in their presentation.

The Tassels will divide into two groups and call at all fraternity houses, drumming up pep for the season's opening football game with the South Dakota Coyotes Saturday.

Mitchell said today that plans for the year's rallies are rounding into shape, and will be announced shortly. He said that a huge send-off rally for the Cornhusker football team before the men leave for Northwestern next week was being planned. Present indications are that the new cheer leaders will be used at the send-off rally next week. An attempt is to be made at all rallies this year to build up group singing, Mitchell said.

In general, rally plans as approved by the Student Council this afternoon when it delegated the innocents the authority to run rallies this year, call for three major pep gatherings for home games, in addition to send-off rallies for Northwestern, Missouri, and Kansas Aggie.

DEPARTMENT ISSUES TWO NEW BULLETINS

Home Economics Division Prints Booklets Women's Careers; Nursery.

Two home economics department bulletins have been issued by the university during the past summer.

"Careers for Women Trained in Home Economics" is a thirty page booklet describing different home economics vocations and the qualifications and preparation necessary for each. Headings include institution management, dietetics, commercial opportunities, extension, teaching, radio, research, social service, journalism, home making, design, textiles and clothing, child development, foods and nutrition, equipment, housing and home management. Curricula, cost and college activities are discussed.

Copies of this bulletin have been sent to girls who graduated from Nebraska high schools last spring, as well as to other prospective home economics students.

"The Nursery School" is a publication which describes the University of Nebraska nursery school, of which Dr. Ruth Staples is director. The bulletin indicates the relation of the nursery school to courses offered by the university and shows how it may contribute to the welfare of the children who attend. It is stressed that this school is planned to supplement, not substitute for, the home. Every effort is made to help the child get the right start in fundamental social habits.

Established in 1925, the Nebraska university nursery school is housed in one of the few buildings in this country designed especially for a pre-school laboratory.

COUNTRYMAN STAFF TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON

Editor Round Will Release Fall Selections on Sunday.

Announcement of appointees to the Cornhusker Countryman staff for the first semester will be made Sunday, according to Editor George Round. More applications than usual were received and it is taking more time to place the students on the staff than was expected.

More freshmen applied for positions on the staff this year than ever before. Since but few agricultural journalists are available, with but one exception, the editorship will probably be open for the first semester of next year.

Work, however, on the first issue has started and it is hoped that it will be out the first week in October. Short feature articles on students and faculty members will make up the largest part of the magazine. Oz Black, Lincoln cartoonist, has designed the cover page for the publication.

Prof. R. F. Crawford met with Business Manager Charles Kellogg and George Round this week to let the printing contracts. The Nebraska Farmer will again print the magazine.

The entertainment consisted of Eddie Jungbluth's orchestra, the Kovan sisters, Frankie Young, Ross Mac and Roberta Wehrman, and Joan and Marjorie Whitney. Eight or ten reels of football pictures and individual shots of players were presented on the screen. During the close-ups a soloist sang "My Nebraska," by Theodore Dier.

About 175 women can be accommodated in the central building, which will include kitchen and dining room facilities until the other buildings are completed. Work on the center unit is expected to start late this fall, and according to present plans the building will be opened in July when it is completed.
