PERSHING RIFLES WILL SALUTE SERVICE FLAG

Parade and Service Feature At Beginning of Iowa Nebraska Tilt.

Members of Pershing Rifles will form a firing unit to salute the university service flag at the Iowa-Nebraska game Saturday afternoon, according to an announcement made by James K. McGeachin, captain of the company.

A parade consisting of Colonel Albert Lucke and his staff, the R. O. T. C. band, the colors, Pershing Rifles, and the service flag will be formed and will march on to the field just before the start of the game. The members of Pershing Rifles will fire a salute of three rounds.

The purpose of this ceremony, which has become an annual custom, is to salute the university service flag and to commemorate the students of the university who lost their lives in the last war. The flag bears a star for every student who died in the war.

Members of Tarsels, girls' pep organization, will carry the flag out on the field. The salute will be fired and taps will be blown immediately afterward. During the ceremony, Ray Ramsey, secretary of the alumni association and announcer at the games, will give a short talk through the loud speaker system explaining the event.

ence, he received the Nichols, Willard Gibbs, and Chandler medals.

Giving a detailed comparison of simple radicals and organic combinations, Dr. Gomberg, one of the world's leading organic students, told of the rapid development of organic discoveries and its rapid stride from 1850 until the present time. He praised Dr. H. G. Deming's text on General Chemistry for its historical references.

Install Officers.

Following his talk, the installation of officers of the Nebraska section took place. Those who were installed were S. Avery, chancellor; H. A. Pagel, chairman; Mary L. Morse, secretary-treasurer; J. J. Blish, D. J. Brown, and C. J. Frankforter, members of the executive committee.

The evening meeting followed an informal dinner at the University club, where Dr. Gomberg addressed the gathering on the "Present State of the American Chemical Society." His report indicated that financial prospects for the impending year were especially good, "in spite of present financial conditions." The present membership of the society is 19,000, according to his report and the annual budget is set at $700,000. The organization now has on reserve $290,000.

Dr. Gomberg, coming to America from Russia when he was eighteen years old, matriculated as a freshman at the University of Michigan in 1886. He later received degrees of B. S., M. S., and Sc. D., from that institution. He later enrolled at Munich and Heidelberg where he continued his research in organic chemistry.

Pioneer in Field.

He became a pioneer in organic chemistry during his college course. This was at a time when almost all emphasis was placed upon methods of analysis and very little upon synthesis. After studying in Europe, the doctor returned to America where he continued his study which resulted in the discovery of the elusive triphenylmethyl. His discovery of trivalent carbon is what raised him to his present height in fame.

The Growler

By HARRY FOSTER

due to an injured right hand which I obtained in, at or to the Missouri game I am forced to type thusly: pardon dear reader, by hum its just a bad attack of the qualls or of the zepthers, the game and athletic contests in general are out of my scope but the missou game even deserves mention in the society column, what a game, oh boy, oh boy, oh boy, a finish a la ralph henry barbour was what this was, the referee was so excited that he couldn't get his gun out of his plus four, those nebraska men were determined, those tigers were determined, all of which constitutes a dilemma, a dilemma is something that goes with a swistitch, all of which reminds me of firemas and the bus ride which we took, we took some of the missou sweethearts on dates and conveyed them in a thirty five passenger bus, that was the sum total of the date, how many nebraska girls would go with a date who, with several quadruple-dates, turned up with a bunch of girls are not democratic muchly enough somewhat, all of which proves the point that you shouldn't stick your hand out of a closed window to see if it is raining or not.

One thing that was very noticeable at missouri was the lack of school spirit, the turn out for the game consisted of about six thousand, many of which were knot holers and b. s. a. boys, the spirit was one of resignation and hope did not make its appearance until the close of the game, many of the students stayed away from the game, all of which goes to show that there is a tendency throughout the country towards a depression in school spirit, it is doing away with one of the most sacred of customs and cheating our heirs out of a wonderful heritage, spirit amounts to the soul of the school, you might as well call the i. c. s. your alma mater as to be of a school void of school spirit, nebraskas spirit is merely sleeping, it is not dead, lets fire it up and keep it burning until it becomes the symbol of the valley, the by-word of the nation, nebraska spirit, nebraska loyalty and nebraskas flaming courage.

Younger Generation Is Not Nearly As Degenerate as Bustle-Sporting Ancestors, Declares Dr. Grummann

BY JACK ERICKSON

This younger generation which we are supposed to represent is far more moral, far more restrained than its ancestors, but more intelligent and frank.

That is the opinion of Dr. Paul H. Grummann, former director of the University of Nebraska school of fine arts, now in Omaha. In a feature article in the Omaha World-Herald Dr. Grummann defends the younger generation from those who declare it is going to the dogs.

"If manners and morals ever struck bottom, it was in the middle of the eighteenth century," declared Mr. Grummann. "Along with the orange toga that disgraced the human body in the form of bustles and corsets and frills and puffs, there was an inordinate amount of immorality and vulgarity."

The flapper rebellion, flippantly underestimated, asserted itself in a most vigorous way, Dr. Grummann believes. It showed that women desired once more to be women and to declare their independence in dress, demanding freedom of the body and an opportunity for self development. This rebellion, he says, marked a great step in the right direction.

Men, unfortunately, have not succeeded in making the same amount of progress in the right direction of rational and artistic apparel that women have, Dr. Grummann pointed out.

Dr. Grummann's article traces the development of art from the early Greek classical period, through the age of realism, and along its various progressive steps down to the art age of today which is keynoted by simplicity.

He believes that it is the trend of modern art which has improved the taste and morals of today. The distinct advance made over civilization of the nineteenth century is emphasized by Dr. Grummann. "Due to the industrial revolution," he says, "the middle of the nineteenth century showed a greater degradation of taste than any period in human history. The old apprenticeship system has been given up and nothing had taken its place. Everyone was free to pursue any art or craft without the least training."

"This also reached into the professions and arts with the result that public taste degenerated in a most appalling way. This accounts for the architectural monstrosities that still make portions of our cities hideous. This accounts for the terrible mid-Victorian interiors cluttered up with miscellaneous junk. This accounts for that atrocious anomaly called the parlor, with its center table and "what-not." This accounts for the terrible styles worn by both men and women in the middle of the century."

One of the greatest sources of satisfaction in our day, Dr. Grummann asserts, is that this madness has been passing. Education and training have again become popu-
